The Banner Says...

Equality in the pipe band movement

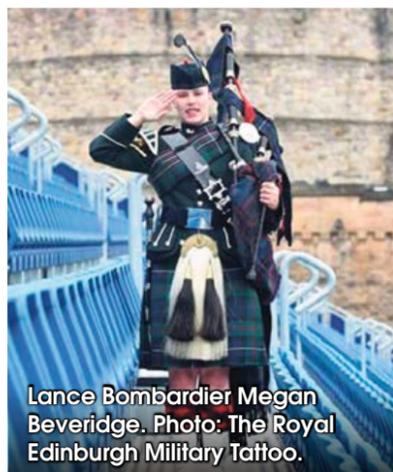

by Sean Cairney

Pipe bands are an icon of Scotland and enjoyed by millions of people across the world, a true global sound enjoyed by not just those of Scottish descent. Think pipe bands and many will think of men proudly playing, but women can quite often be overlooked in this talented group of worldwide musicians. Historically the pipe band movement was not considered a place for women, perhaps this was reinforced as many Scottish pipe bands had links to the military and bagpipes were considered as an instrument of war. However, women's connections to bagpipes goes back deep into history. In the late 1800's a set of bagpipes was found in a female's coffin in Egypt, believed to be about 3,000 years old. The pipe band world was not an accommodating place for women, nor did it try to be for many years. The world's first all-female pipe band is thought to have in fact started in the East End of London, England when the Dagenham Girl Pipers Pipe Band was created by the Reverend Joseph Waddington in 1930. With Scotland getting its first female pipe band in 1934. Women were not mixed into regular pipe bands more commonly until the 1970s. Prior to that they were outright barred from taking part in a pipe band.

Females in the pipe band movement are here to thankfully stay

Today it is estimated women make up around 20-30% of pipe band numbers and recognised as quite literally 'playing' an important role in the pipe band movement.

But is that enough? Clearly gender has no role in how well someone can play an instrument. However, some today even argue that women are better off suited to the drum corps, rather than playing the pipes as they have a smaller lung capacity than male players. As we go to press with this issue a new study into the underrepresentation of women in Scotland's piping and drumming scene has been launched by The National Piping Centre in Glasgow, in collaboration with the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland. Entitled Women in Piping and Drumming: Equality, Inclusivity, and Diversity, the six-month study is launching an online survey, designed to gain a better understanding of women's perspectives and experiences within piping and drumming in Scotland.

It was only a few years ago, in 2016, that Lance Bombardier Megan Beveridge made history by becoming the first serving female soldier to perform as the Lone Piper at the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo. The coveted role, which is often a highlight for many visitors to the Tattoo, had only had one other female Lone Piper in 1977 in its over 70-year history. We cover a variety of piping events in the Scottish Banner and you may have noticed most of the solo competitions are led and won by male, and white, performers and judges. Of the most prestigious solo piping championships in Scotland, you can count female winners with one hand, and at times just one finger. The oldest piping society in the world, the Royal Scottish Pipers Society, only allowed women to join in 2015 and they were founded in 1881!

While females in the pipe band movement are here to thankfully stay, we are still far from having an equal representation of players. I know and have met many great female pipers around the world, and I hope that gender disparity in the traditional Scottish music scene continues to be put well into the history books. As we need both men and women to keep the pipe band movement flourishing around the world.

In this issue

When thinking of Scotland's myriad of open places and stunning nature you may first think of the Highlands or the rolling countryside of the Scottish Borders. However, at the turn of the 20th century, the Scottish adventurer Ella Christie came back to Scotland from a trip to Asia and was inspired to build a Japanese garden. The historic garden at Cowden Castle was once considered "the best Japanese garden in the western world", but sadly fell into disarray.

The garden however has been nurtured back to health and again open should you be looking for something unique and peaceful to do when next in Scotland.

There is nothing more awe inspiring than a Scottish castle. They reek of history, sorrow and still today dominate the surroundings where they are located. This month our very own Castle Hunter, David C. Weinczok, reflects on some of his favourite castles he has visited in Scotland. Since he has been to nearly 450 of these historic sites across the nation, he is well poised to recommend some perhaps you have yet to visit.

Scottish fashion was the star of the show recently in Washington, DC as the 20th annual Dressed to Kilt fashion event again took place. It was the first time the event moved to the nation's capital and tartan, tweed and style were all put on show for a great cause.

The Stone of Destiny

One of Scotland's most historic relics will be on display for the world to see this month. The Stone of Scone or Stone of Destiny (also referred to as The Coronation Stone) is an ancient symbol of Scotland's monarchy and was used for centuries in the inauguration of its kings and today is housed at Edinburgh Castle.

The stone will play a key role in King Charles III's coronation, which will take place on Saturday 6 May 2023 at Westminster Abbey in London. Charles will be formally crowned King of the United Kingdom and 14 other Commonwealth nations, including Australia, Canada and New Zealand. The stone will be returned to Edinburgh after the coronation events to the castle's Crown Room.

Are you a female member of a pipe band, if so, what are your experiences? Do you think more women should be in pipe bands? Do you have any comments from the content in this month's edition? Share your story with us by email, post, social media or: #ScottishBanner, #TheBanner

Hayland Gathering

I attended the inaugural Hayland Gathering at Hay March 11th 2023. A good 2-hour drive across the plains on a beautiful day. A large crowd had gathered for this first event of what will be an annual event. The stirring sounds of the bagpipes of the attending bands as they marched in to the sportsground stirred the cockles of the heart. A large group of youngsters contested the Highland Dancing, viewed by a very appreciative crowd.

Guest dancer was National and Australian champion dancer Morven Johnston from Western Australia. Morven arrived in Australia aged 4 years from the weaving village of Kilbarchan in west Scotland. Spectators also enjoyed the Highland Muscle group and their skills at heavy lifting, this included ladies as well! A few Clans had stalls, and this will increase for next year I would think. Good to note that many attendees wore their Clan tartan either over the shoulder or on their hat.

The Kilted Dash was hugely popular with the youngsters, all trying to find a kilt to borrow for the Dash. With prize money of $100 they were dead keen. All day music, including the local Sing Australia group and Sydney based Auld Alliance, performed beautifully. I was disappointed not to meet up with any of "my" Clan the Matheson's!! Judging by the popularity of this first event, Hay organisers will be keen to repeat the event for many years to come. Congratulations to the Hay committee.

Scotland's link to the Panama Canal

This was such a wonderful story (Scotland's link to the Panama Canal, the Scottish Banner August, 2022). I read it twice and forwarded it on to many "Zonians" (Americans who grew up in the American Canal Zone) at the Panama Canal. I drove by Corozal weekly over a period of 30 years and would also work and shop at the U.S. Military Exchange (PX). I often wondered where the name Corozal came from, as it was such a unique yet odd name. I am so grateful for this wonderful article and journey of the amazing men who helped build the greatest waterway.

I could only imagine how incredible it would have been to have lived during this time.

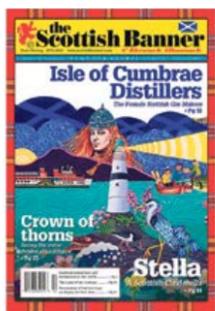

Very respectfully,

Erik Petroni, USA

(Son of Captain Gerard Petroni, Panama Canal Ships Pilot)

Ed note: Thank you for your letter Erik and so glad this article found you.

Scottish Gin

The Banner itself is wonderful and speaks to a life enjoyed. Being a gin gal, I particularly appreciated its mention (The Isle of Cumbrae Distillers, the Scottish Banner, February, 2023), considering Hendricks was born there. I have never been to Scotland, but I feel it has to be on my bucket list. Our good friends Grace and Gerry Dwyer have been many times and are in love with Scotland. We need to find out about it and look forward to going sooner than later. My Dad was a MacDonald, and being a true Scot, thought my husband should change his name. Perhaps so, but I am fortunate enough to have both Scottish and Irish heritage. I love them both.

Recent monetary increase in scholarship awards

The Wabash Valley Scottish Society (Terre Haute, IN, USA) has very recently increased by $500, its two scholarships: Academic, for Scottish, British and/or Celtic studies at the college level, and Cultural, for piping, dancing, drumming, and more, for those persons 12 years or older. The former is for $1500, the latter for $1000.

Scottish wedding customs

I love to read my Scottish Banner. You always have such interesting news from 'home'. I really liked the mention of the Gretna Green marriages in the February issue. I grew up in a small village in Stirlingshire in the 50s & 60s. One of the customs of the village was when a girl was getting married, the week before the wedding her friends came to her home. She was sat in a wheel barrow with a potty (commode) full of Epsom salts on her lap.

It also had a doll and a jar of Vaseline. Neighbours placed a penny for luck into the potty. The wheelbarrow was also decorated with balloons and streamers and one girl pushed the barrow and the others sang as we walked around the village: "Hard up kick the can (your name), now has got a man!" That always drew a lot of attention and the kids joined in the singing. We went to the house of the bride to be and had a show of presents and then tea. All the neighbours gave a small present, usually a tea caddy and tea, clothes rope and pegs and things like that.

Bedding was one of the more expensive presents. I still have some of those presents. Another was the day of wedding the father of the bride threw out money from the bridal car to all the kids waiting and watching. That was almost 66 years ago, I wonder if they still have some of the old customs taking place in Scotland? Keep up the good work, we Scots love it!

Ed note: Thanks Isabella for your letter and memories. Does any reader know of any old Scottish wedding customs still taking place today? Please share it with us.

Orkney cancer gene link revealed

Bay of Pierowall, Westray, Orkney.

People with grandparents from Orkney have a variation in a gene that could increase the chances of developing breast and ovarian cancer, research shows. One in 100 women who are descendants of families in Westray, Orkney, have the same change in the BRCA1 gene - one of the commonest genes linked to breast and ovarian cancer, according to the results. In Scotland, testing is currently available to people with a direct family connection to the BRCA1 gene, or who have a close history of ovarian or breast cancer in their family. As a result of these findings, plans for a pilot trial to widen testing to Westray people with a locally born grandparent, regardless of a family history of cancer, are being put in place by NHS Grampian and local cancer charity Friends of ANCHOR. If the pilot proves successful, it may be extended to anyone in Scotland with a Westray-born grandparent. Around one in 1000 women across the UK have inherited a variation to the BRCA1 gene. A team of geneticists from the Universities of Aberdeen and Edinburgh repeatedly discovered the same single change to this gene in women from Orkney with breast and/or ovarian cancer.

Edinburgh Scientists studied genetic information from more than 2,000 volunteers with Orkney grandparents in the Orkney Complex Diseases Study (ORCADES).

They discovered the BRCA1 variant in 1 per cent of men and women with historic Westray ancestors. As the gene variant is hereditary can affect multiple members of families. Risk-reducing surgery, breast screening with MRI from age 30 and lifestyle advice can all improve health for women with the gene, experts say. This research, funded by the Medical Research Council, is part of Viking Genes, which aims to discover the genes and any changes in these that could influence the risk of disease. Professor Jim Wilson, Professor of Human Genetics, University of Edinburgh, said: "The fact that one in a hundred Orcadian women carry a high-risk variant for breast and ovarian cancer highlights the value of population studies such as Viking Genes, without which we would not know this. It is imperative that Scottish island populations are represented in research, to allow equitable delivery of genomic medicine across the country."

Holland Waterfront Celtic Festival & Highland Games

The McClintic School of Scottish Dance

Coming next month is the 2nd annual Holland Celtic Festival. The festival was conceived by Craig Rich and Peter Grimm, along with a group of friends, who formed the 501(c)(3) non-profit, Holland Celtic Society. Highlights for this year's event include: Friday Evening's Ceilidh (Kay'-Lee) is a "21 & over" party in a huge "Irish Pub Tent" ($20 cover charge (tickets in advance). This features two bands: The Conklin Ceili Band and Detroit's own Wakefire! Gates open at 6:00 PM. Music at 7:00. Close at 11:00 PM.

Saturday's family-friendly festival is $10 admission, with children 12 and under FREE. Also free to those with their Friday evening wristband. Gates open at 9:00 AM, music starts at 10:00 am. Close at 10:00 PM. The day features: Live music all day (10:00 AM to 9:30 PM) featuring eight performances by: Toby Bresnahan, Selkie, Mona Shores Fiddlers, Uneven Ground, Ironwood, Leprecons, CrossBow and Barley Saints. In addition, there will be five Scottish and Irish dance schools:

Ardan Academy of Irish Dance, Auburn Glen School of Scottish Dance, McClintic School of Highland Dance, Michigan Irish Dance Academy and Scoil Rince Ní Bhraonáin.

Other highlights include: A full schedule of Highland Athletic Competition (caber tossing, heavy weight throwing for distance and height, hammer throwing, etc.) with 70 athletes in kilts! A Scottish Clan "village" featuring 20 Scottish Clans. Genealogy assistance in the Genealogy Tent, Celtic goods vendors and Celtic food booths, Hands-on Celtic Cricket (learn to play!), beer, wine, seltzers, scotch & whiskey in the Irish Pub Tent, Pipe and Drum bands, a "Keltic Kids" area, Hugh Irwin, the Kilted Magician and Liam, the Extra Large Leprechaun.

Scotspeak is a selection of quotes which made headlines in Scotland last month on a variety of current Scottish affairs.

"We are excited to introduce the UK's first autonomous bus fleet in east Scotland which is also home to our headquarters and where it all began over 40 years ago. We are proud to be at the forefront of transport innovation with this project that marks a significant milestone for public transport and we look forward to welcoming our customers on board in the coming months."

Stagecoach UK managing director Carla Stockton-Jones said the world's first full-size, self-driving bus services will begin this month in Scotland. The fleet will be the first registered full-sized autonomous buses, made up of five vehicles, which will travel a 14-mile route. The route will go across the iconic Forth Road Bridge from Ferrytoll Park & Ride in Fife to Edinburgh Park Transport Interchange. Once registered, the service will operate a frequent timetable with the capacity for around 10,000 journeys per week.

"Culloden is a powerful and evocative historic site, and the story of the battle and its aftermath have global relevance and interest. We look forward to welcoming visitors to the site for our commemoration weekend and exploring the story of Culloden together – mindful not just of the events and legacies of the battle, but of the impacts of war and civil war on the lives of people around the world today."

Gail Cleaver, Operations Manager for the National Trust for Scotland, commented ahead of April's 277th anniversary of the Battle of Culloden. The Battle of Culloden, which took place just outside Inverness on 16 April 1746, was part of a civil war that would decide the ruler of Great Britain and ultimately have a global impact. It saw over 1,500 lives lost in the space of an hour. The anniversary service and commemoration events brought people together in person and online to commemorate the fallen on both the Jacobite and Government sides. The event also saw the launch of a new exhibition, Culloden Memories, which has seen people from all over the world sending in their memories, photographs and mementos of the site – it covers the social history of the battlefield since 1746.

"Glasgow defies description. Many great men and women have tried to describe its spirit and failed miserably. What do you say about a town that dances, sings, plays and jokes differently from everybody else? The winner of this Award will have to be a nutter like me..."

Sir Billy Connolly said ahead of the inaugural Sir Billy Connolly Spirit of Glasgow Award, which was given out at the 2023 Glasgow International Comedy Festival. The Spirit of Glasgow award was defined by five criteria – humour, resilience, openness, depth and being unapologetic. The winner of the inaugural award was comedian Janey Godley.

"With much of the work on the castle taking place at high level, even putting up the scaffolding has been a major task. But we're excited that it's now in place so we can start on our conservation work, ensuring that the local community and Arran's visitors can enjoy this magnificent island castle, and its exceptional collections, far into the future."

Sally Gandon, the National Trust for Scotland's Operations Manager for Brodick Castle, said the scaffolding is going up at Brodick Castle, as they embark on a major project to protect Arran's landmark castle for future generations. The NTS have mapped out a nine-month programme of building work on the fabric of the building to help it withstand the effects of time, rain and climate change. The skilled and specialist restoration work will include roofing repairs, overhauling windows, repair of stonework and repointing, and improvements to leadwork, guttering and drainage.

"This is an exciting time for genealogy at Strathclyde and the genealogical community. Our passion is to help people, whether they are experienced or new to the subject, to learn more, connect with each other and further their learning or research. We are already well respected internationally for our programmes, which gives the Institute a great start. Our aim is to create a vibrant space where genealogical learning and discourse can flourish – we are reaching out to anyone with an interest to join us on our journey."

The University of Strathclyde's Dr Calista Williams said an initiative to promote world-leading genealogy education, events, and research has been launched at the University of Strathclyde. The Strathclyde Institute for Genealogical Studies has been established with the aim of delivering academic excellence through the creation of new courses and research opportunities to run alongside the University's long-standing world-leading postgraduate programme. The creation of the Institute will facilitate the development of collaborations, driven by a growing international appetite to discover ancestors, build family trees and better understand results from genetic genealogy tests.

"Habitat loss, persecution and hybridisation with domestic cats has brought the Scottish wildcat population to the brink of extinction. The Saving Wildcats partnership has been a lifeline for the species and our decision to grant a translocation licence to allow wildcats to be released in the Highlands of Scotland marks a crucial point in the long journey towards conserving this iconic species. This journey is not without difficulty, and we know that there are more hurdles to overcome before we reach the point where we are ready to release the wildcats into carefully selected areas of the Cairngorms National Park. Once there, the wildcats will face further challenges, so it's crucial the project continues to work with local communities, farmers, land-owners and cat owners to ensure wildcats are given the best chance to survive and thrive. We are incredibly proud to be part of the Saving Wildcats project, as we take another step towards restoring the 'Highland Tiger' to Scotland's landscapes for future generations to cherish."

NatureScot's Head of Biodiversity Dr Katherine Leys said NatureScot has approved a licence application from the Saving Wildcats partnership to release wildcats in the Cairngorms National Park later this year. The decision marks the first-ever conservation translocation of wildcats in Britain, with the first in a series of trial releases being planned to help restore Scotland's critically endangered wildcat population. The Saving Wildcats partnership plans to release around 20 wildcats each year, with the first trial release planned for June 2023. Scotland's wildcats are a subpopulation of the European wildcat and are the same species as their relatives on the continent.

Research shines new light on the Stone of Destiny

Innovative methods have revealed new information, including previously unrecorded markings and further evidence of the Stone's provenance.

Member of the HES Digital Documentation & Innovation team digitally scanning the Stone of Destiny at Edinburgh Castle.

A new digital 3D model of the Stone has been created, allowing the Stone to be viewed from different perspectives in higher detail than ever before. This has revealed previously unrecorded markings on the Stone's surface, which have the appearance of Roman numerals. The digital imaging has also improved visibility of the geological features of the Stone, such as cross-bedding, which is indicative of the geological conditions in which the sandstone was formed and which is characteristic of sandstone of the Scone Sandstone Formation. The many tooling marks evident from original working of the stone and areas of wear and tear can now also be seen more clearly, as well as further details of the 1951 repair.

An object unique and important to Scotland's history

The digital scanning has also been used to create an exact scale 3D printed replica of the Stone, which has been used to help preparations for placing the Stone in the Coronation Chair. Ewan Hyslop, Head of Research and Climate Change at HES, said: "It's very exciting to discover new information about an object as unique and important to Scotland's history as the Stone of Destiny. The high level of detail we've been able to capture through the digital imaging has enabled us to re-examine the tooling marks on the surface of the Stone, which has helped confirm that the Stone has been roughly worked by more than one stonemason with a number of different tools, as was previously thought. The discovery of previously unrecorded markings is also significant, and while at this point we're unable to say for certain what their purpose or meaning might be, they offer the exciting opportunity for further areas of study."

Harnessing a wider range of forensic techniques than available in the past, new scientific analysis has also uncovered additional information about the Stone. This has enhanced the results of the previous investigation in 1998, when fragments from the Stone underwent detailed examination by the British Geological Survey. This work identified the Stone as being indistinguishable from sandstones of the Scone Sandstone Formation, which outcrop in the area around Scone Palace, near Perth. The new examination has provided further evidence for the Stone's origins, while also unearthing more of its post-quarrying history. X-ray fluorescence (XRF) analysis was undertaken to determine the elemental composition of the Stone, leading to the discovery of traces of copper alloy on the top surface of the Stone that coincide with a dark stain near its centre. This suggests a bronze or brass object has been in contact with or placed on the Stone at some time in its history.

The Coronation of King Charles

Microscopic traces of gypsum plaster were also found to be present, infilling pores in the sandstone at various places around the Stone, possibly traces of a plaster cast that was taken some time in the past. Ewan continued: "The scientific analysis we've been able to undertake using cutting-edge techniques that weren't previously available to us have offered some intriguing new clues to the history of the Stone. We may not have all the answers at this stage, but what we've been able to uncover is testament to a variety of uses in the Stone's long history and contributes to its provenance and authenticity. The Engine Shed is one of very few places within the heritage sector globally to offer this kind of cutting-edge digital and science work, and we're delighted to be able to demonstrate the potential of these methods to enhance our understanding of such an important piece of our past as the Stone of Destiny."

The Stone of Destiny will be included in the Coronation of King Charles III, where it will be placed within the Coronation Chair for the ceremony, before returning to Scotland. A number of different teams within HES, with a range of specialist expertise, are involved in preparing the Stone for its move to Westminster Abbey for the Coronation, working in partnership with the Conservation team at Westminster Abbey.

New images for Declaration of Arbroath released

First letter of the Declaration, a sheepskin document inscribed in Latin.

New photographs of the Declaration of Arbroath have been published by National Records of Scotland (NRS), ahead of the famous document going on display in June 2023. These never-before-seen photographs are being made available to mark its 703rd anniversary, which took place in April.

The Declaration will be displayed for the first time in 18 years from 3 June–2 July 2023 at the National Museum of Scotland in Edinburgh. The Declaration of Arbroath is a letter to the Pope sent in 1320 from the barons of the Kingdom of Scotland seeking his recognition of Robert the Bruce as the country's lawful king.

Scotland's medieval past

NRS Chief Executive Janet Egdell said: "NRS is proud to help display the Declaration of Arbroath, one of the most prestigious documents in our collections, a record of a key period in Scottish history. The Declaration is striking but at 703 years old, it's fragile and can only be displayed occasionally to ensure its long-term preservation, under the care of our conservation experts. I hope that these new images released today bring this key period in Scottish history to life for people and as many as possible take the chance to see the Declaration for themselves from 2 June."

Dr Alice Blackwell, Senior Curator of Medieval Archaeology and History at National Museums Scotland: "We're delighted to be able to present this rare and fragile part of Scotland's medieval past in a free exhibition at the National Museum of Scotland this summer. Its evocative sentiments have given the Declaration of Arbroath a special distinction, not just in Scotland but around the world. We are looking forward to inviting visitors to learn more about this fascinating document and to enjoy a rare opportunity to see it first-hand."

The Declaration of Arbroath will be displayed at the National Museum of Scotland from 3 June until 2 July. Admission is free and the exhibition will be in Gallery 2, Level 3, 10:00 – 17:00 daily. Further information on the Declaration and its history is available at: www.nrscotland.gov.uk/Declaration

Get ready for two hours of heart pounding, fast paced family entertainment when the 10th annual Okanagan Military Tattoo returns to Vernon, British Columbia on July 29 & 30, 2023.

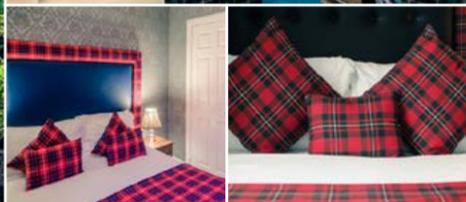

- The Tattoo is an event that will stir the heart and feed the soul. It's Vernon's largest annual indoor event and western North America's only Military Tattoo.
- Traditionally, Military Tattoos have provided an opportunity for civilians to witness the precision and professionalism of those who have dedicated their lives to the defence and security of their country. In recent times, Tattoos have become more inclusive with civilians participating in athletics, bands, dancing and choirs.
- The term Tattoo evolved from a European tradition dating back to the 17th century when the Low Country innkeepers would cry "doe den tap toe" meaning "turn off the taps!" as the fifes and drums of the local regiment signalled the soldiers to return to their barracks.

- Headliners for the 2023 Tattoo include the Naden Band of the Royal Canadian Navy, the regimental band of the 15th Field Artillery, and the RCMP "E" Division Pipes and Drums as we celebrate the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the RCMP.
- The annual "tribute to the veterans" will commemorate the 80th anniversary of the Sicily Invasion and the start of the Italian Campaign.
- Tickets are now on sale with significant discounts for seniors, current and former members of the Military, RCMP, First Responders, Health Care workers and groups of 10 or more.

How well do you know Scotland? To test your knowledge we have assembled ten fun questions on its geography, history and culture — but if you get stumped, the solutions can be found underneath. Good luck!

- 1) The village of Kemnay takes its name from the "kame" on which it sits - what is a kame?
- 2) Where is Kisimul Castle, home of the MacNeil clan?
- 3) In which year was capital punishment abolished in Scotland?
a) 1963, b) 1964, or c) 1965?
- 4) The 42nd Royal Regiment of Foot is better known by which name?
- 5) In Old Scots what is a spindrift?
- 6) According to legend the Giants Causeway once stretched from County Antrim in Ireland to the coast of which Hebridean island?

- 7) Name the songwriter who penned the anthem Flower Of Scotland?
- 8) What in Scotland is the Bullers of Buchan?
- 9) Where in Scotland is the Electric Brae?
- 10) What is the claim to fame of Wanlockhead village in Lanarkshire?

Answers

- 1) A ridge.
- 2) On the Isle of Barra in the Hebrides.
- 3) c) 1965.
- 4) The Black Watch.
- 5) Snow driven by the wind into drifts.
- 6) Staffa.
- 7) Roy Williamson of the folk group The Corries.
- 8) Sea cliffs, near Peterhead, Aberdeenshire.
- 9) Outside Dunure, Ayrshire.
- 10) It claims to be Scotland's highest village.

Scotland's zen garden

By: Judy Vickers

The place of pleasure and delight

Ella Christie, National Library of Scotland dated 1909, Public domain, via Wikimedia Commons.

Everything about the Japanese Garden at Cowden is designed to slow visitors down, to calm the mind and encourage contemplation, even down to the uneven stones underfoot at the entrance arch, which is carved with the words “the place of pleasure and delight”. These days, the garden, near the town of Dollar, quietly hums with tranquillity and serenity – yet its history is filled with turbulence and drama. Created by one of the most extraordinary and pioneering Scottish women of the 20th century, it has survived destruction at the hands of vandals and abandonment for more than 50 years to become restored to its former glory by one of her descendants.

This summer the final touches to the restoration of the main garden will be put into place, including a wooden sunshade, which is currently under construction. It will mark more than a decade of work by Sara Stewart, great niece of the garden's creator Ella Christie, who inherited the estate in 2012. “I had Ella on my shoulders,” she has said of creating the plans to revitalise the 2.8-hectare site. And Ella Christie would be quite a formidable, if inspiring, character to have watching over you.

Cowden Castle and Estate

Ella's father, John, had made his money in coal in Lanarkshire and to seal his entry into the landed gentry, bought a big pile - Cowden Castle and Estate - in 1865. Four-year-old Ella moved there with her mother, brother and sister and grew up on the estate which had once belonged to the bishops of St Andrews. As a family they were fond of travel and Ella had already visited much of Europe by the time her mother died in 1894.

Her brother had died at 12 and her sister, Alice, was married so she became her father's travelling companion and the pair ventured further afield to Egypt, Palestine and Syria.

But this exciting lifestyle came to an abrupt end in 1902 when her father died. Lindsey Gibb, a Perthshire storyteller who was commissioned last year by Year of Storytelling funds to uncover more details about Ella's extraordinary life, explains: “Ella was very much with her father a lot of the time but the day after he died there was a knock on the door. I always picture the man standing there in a trench coat with a clipboard. They (Ella and sister Alice) discovered only then that all their father's money had been willed away from them and given to a charity that he had set up without them knowing. Alice was married and married well but Ella was left destitute. She had no money of her own and no home, overnight she had lost everything.”

There had been no sign of the rift between father and daughters before his death but Lindsey says: “He had had an illness before he died and his personality had changed,” and points to the possibility of some form of dementia. But even as the man from the charity left the shell-shocked daughters at the doorstep and proceeded to tour the house, cataloguing the furniture and family's possessions as he went, Ella was forming a plan. “Ella, being Ella, doesn't take this lying down,” says Lindsey. “She fights it in court and she wins a healthy settlement, the equivalent of several million pounds today and she manages to keep the estate and castle. The orphanage charity which her father had set up was also well provided for. Ella and her sister were very charitable themselves, so it must have been difficult for her to fight it.”

The most important Japanese garden in the Western world

With her future secure, Ella now embarked on her overriding passion in life – travel. With her trusty maid Humphries, she made journeys that few single Western women had even dreamt of in the early years of the 20th century, through India, Kashmir, Ceylon, Malaya and Borneo. She banqueted with the Maharaja of Kashmir, camped in snow in the Chorbat Pass in Pakistan, trekked on foot for 60 miles in the Desoi mountains in the Himalayas and became the first Western woman to meet the Dalai Lama.

“She must have been incredibly charming, people just open doors for her left, right and centre,” says Lindsey. But it was when, after travelling through Korea, she took a boat to Japan, that another passion was ignited. “She just falls in love with the gardens in Japan – and handily she has an estate back home where she can recreate one,” says Lindsey.

Now reopened to the public, the garden is once again welcoming visitors from near and far.

That 1907 tip to Kyoto and beyond inspired her so much that when she returned to Scotland, she hired Taki Handi, a female Japanese garden designer, from the Royal School of Garden Design at Nagoya, but at that time studying at Studley College in England to create her Shā Raku En – the place of pleasure and delight. “She [Taki] became the first woman to create a Japanese garden outside of Japan and even in Japan it was rare,” says Lindsey.

She did an impressive job, melding views of the nearby Ochils Hills into the lines of the garden and using local plants as well as imported Japanese specimens and those grown from seeds Ella had snaffled while in Japan. “The garden was created on a marshy bit of the estate, they dammed a burn to create a loch because water is a big part of Japanese gardens,” says Lindsey. A tea house, lanterns and bridges completed the site which so faithfully reproduced the exquisite gardens which had inspired Ella in Japan, that in 1925, Professor Jiji Suzuki, the 18th hereditary head of the Soami School of Imperial Design in Japan, called it the most important Japanese garden in the Western world.

He was a regular visitor, helping to maintain the trees and bushes, and from 1925, the garden was looked after full time by expert Japanese gardener Shinzaburo Matsuo who had lost his entire family in an earthquake in Japan. He found a new home in Scotland and he and Ella had long conversations about gardening plans – despite the fact he spoke no English and Japanese was not one of the four languages Ella was fluent in.

And for Ella it was indeed a place of pleasure and delight, where she held tea parties with her friends as she recharged from her latest travels – she continued to journey until a few months before her death from leukaemia in 1949. By then she was living in just a few rooms of the castle, crammed in with treasures from her globe-trotting.

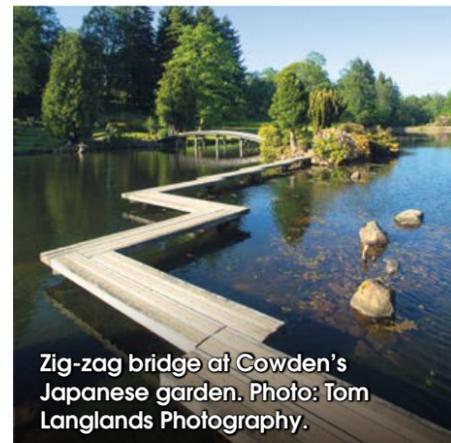

Lives up to its name

After her death, the estate was inherited by her nephew, Robert Stewart, Alice's son. The castle, Lindsey believes, must have been in a poor state, as attempts to sell it failed and it was completely demolished in the 1950s. The Japanese Garden remained however until 1963 when it was destroyed in a vandal attack by local schoolboys. “It was absolutely devastated, they burned everything that could be burned and destroyed everything that could be destroyed,” says Lindsey. “They never caught who did it even though they were seen leaving in their school uniforms. No one has ever been caught and no one has ever come forward as they got older to admit it, we don't know if it was teenage high jinks or if there was something more behind it.”

Too expensive to repair, the garden was then left to slowly decay and become overgrown until 2012 when an ageing Robert passed the garden to his daughter, Sara. She began a fundraising campaign and created a trust to restore the garden to Ella's vision. Helped by £750,000 from the UK government, funds from other sources and expert advice from Professor Masao Fukuhara, best known for restoring the Japanese Gardens at Kew in London, the garden was slowly revived.

Now reopened to the public, the garden is once again welcoming visitors from near and far, just as Ella planned. Lindsey says: “It's wonderful to walk around the corner and find a Japanese garden in this rural part of Scotland - it blends so well with the landscape. I find I instinctively relax as I go through that archway, you get away from all the busy-ness of life. It lives up to its name, it is a pleasure and a delight.”

KINGS CASTLES AND "DURTY" WEE RASCALS

Australian Jim Stoddart was born in a Glasgow Tenement and raised in a Glasgow Housing Scheme 1943-1965. Jim will be taking readers on a trip down memory lane, of a time and place that will never be the same again and hopes even if only a few people in the Scot's Diaspora have a dormant folk memory awakened, then he shall be more than delighted.

Pit up yer Dukes

*My old man's a midgy man,
He works the midgy motor,
A dod of s---- came aff a wa',
And hit him on the stoater.*

Perhaps winning one or two more than I lost is my memory of schoolboy fights in Glasgow or is that merely the effects of time wiping out my worst experiences – and my losses? My older sister claims that I was always in fights, but I don't remember being involved in that many of them. My father's advice on dealing with intimidation at school was simple and consistent. He would say, "Don't start a fight. Don't hit girls. If a boy hits you first, hit him back harder. Stand up for yourself, but if he's a lot bigger and older than you, then it's okay to run. But remember, if you choose to run, he might come back for you the next day." Having learned these rules early in the piece, I didn't really need to bother him again for his advice on how to deal with bullies; I just got on with it as best I could. It was certainly better to take on a bully, no matter what degree of success you could anticipate, for if you didn't, they usually did come back to pester you again. To back down from a challenge and be labelled a 'yellow belly' could make you a victim, more effectively than having met the challenge and got beaten. Even bullies drew upon their best traits when they beat you in a fight. After we had done our best and stood up to them, they usually left us alone, at least for a while.

Apache Jim

I fitted in well at school. I wasn't too brainy or too daft. I wasn't too tall or too short. I wasn't too skinny, and I wasn't too fat. So I wasn't ever to be called a swot, a dunce, a beanpole or runt, a skinny malinky or a Billy Bunter. Nor did I have a Christian name that lent itself easily to ridicule, such as David - Davie, Davie, stick him in the gravy or Robert - Bobby, Bobby, now aged nine, sewed his breeks with binder twine. My surname gave me my nickname, Studsy or Studs but I don't remember it being used in a rhyme such as happened to people like Tom Martin - Tam Marten, went up the lum farten.

But I was saved from being too smug by being gifted one very special feature by nature, a wee gene that gave me a patch of blonde hair at the back of my head; about the size of a jam-jar lid and quietly out of sight of my peripheral vision. This sat incongruously amongst the rest of my brown hair and hazel eyes. When children wanted to get back at me, to hurt my feelings they would call me "Apache Jim." Luckily for me the Apache Indians were quite a competent bunch of warriors on the silver screen, sometimes a bit sneaky in their fighting strategies but definitely not pansies.

Schoolboy fights had rules of chivalry that were developed after hours of watching our screen heroes such as the Count of Monte Christo and Robin Hood. The challenger usually offered a choice of a 'fair fight', meaning a version of the Marquis of Queensberry rules or an 'all in fight' meaning wrestling, kicking, scratching, or whatever. Very wisely, a fair fight was almost universally preferred and that reduced serious injury to the would-be fighters. The combatants' best pals acted as seconds and held the jackets. They helped to ensure that other people didn't get involved when one party began to lose. Unwarranted involvement by third parties was definitely seen as unfair and dishonourable. At the pictures these people usually received a well-deserved arrow in the chest from Will Scarlet or a good knock over the head by Friar Tuck's wooden staff. Down on the spare ground I made do with Jim Main to assist, but Jim was a tough kid and a very useful second for such duels.

"Ah'm gonnae get you, your in for a doin', ah'm gonnae have you efter school," were the ominous catchwords that preceded a formal challenge of "Dae ye want a fight?" These words rang out as the prelude to the acceptance speech. "Aye ye'r on - where aboots then?"

"The spare grun along the road", was usually the answer. Once the time and place for a fight was determined it was vigorously advertised by word of mouth, ensuring that a large group of spectators was in attendance. The spare ground along Leithland Road, where we set up our bonfires on the 5th November, or the grassy hill, close by on Cornaig Road, were often favoured venues for a fight after school, and the soil there must be full of our schoolboy blood. When the bell went at four o'clock the people, in the know, just about carried the contenders to the spare ground to then form a ring of excited bairns chanting "fight, fight, fight." For the would-be combatants the die was cast. There was no turning back.

Like a script in a BBC drama

In fact the worst could have been said to be over, even before a punch was struck. It was that nagging uncertainty that occurred when someone said that they were going to beat you up and then having to wait out the rest of the day for the bell to go to see whether the matter had been forgotten, or whether the continuing taunts were to materialise as fisticuffs at four o'clock.

That was often, in reality, the worst part of all. For once you got to the venue, the adrenaline took over for fight or flight and flight was not a realistic option by that time unless you were prepared to suffer the indignity of being called a coward. Fights, of course, took place between friends, who had fallen out, as well as between sworn enemies. In the first case the combatants often hoped for divine intervention to get them out of a predicament that hasty words had brought about.

Before a fight began there was a re-establishment of what had caused the problem in the first place. This was played out like a script in a BBC drama, for the sake of the inevitable audience, to bring them up to date with the matter at hand. "You were moochin' and took ma cigarette card of Wullie Waddell."

"Naw a didnae. You called ma sister a wee hairy." "So she is. Ask her pals. Anyway, your maw's a midgie raker." "Naw she's no'. You said ah had a pug nose." "So ye have and you said ah was a wee nyaff." "So ye are and ye'r a clipe as well. You told oor teacher that I peed ma troosers, so ye did."

"Naw a didnae that was your pal, Tommy, the wan who told me that you wanted tae fight me." And so it went on with little effect on the outcome, for any move to withdraw from the fight at this late stage would have meant a serious loss of face and a great deal of disappointment for the now eager spectators who had invested time and effort to come and watch this upcoming contest. And of course it was often a third party, like Tell-Tale Tommy an instigator of fights who had egged on both participants in the first place.

Shetland sites to be considered for UNESCO Heritage Status

The UK Government has put forward seven culturally important sites to be considered by the UNESCO World Heritage Committee for recognition. The sites from across the UK and Overseas Territories have been added to the Tentative List meaning they are now part of a seven site list to be put forward by the Government for inscription on the illustrious list. The Tentative List is published around every ten years by the UK Government. It sets out the sites it feels have the best chance of succeeding and will now work with local authorities and devolved administrations to develop their bids. The latest Scottish site is the Zenith of Iron Age Shetland, a collection of three ancient settlements dating back thousands of years. Each of the three sites displays a different and distinctive facet of Iron Age architecture. Dr Val Turner, The Zenith of Iron Age Shetland, Shetland Regional Archaeologist, said: "We are thrilled and excited to remain on the new Tentative List and hope to progress to nomination within the next ten years. We have already experienced the benefits of being on the previous Tentative List, which has attracted first-class research to Shetland. We are currently working to conserve Old Scatness – a key milestone along the road.

UNESCO's World Heritage Site system offers a fantastic opportunity for cultural and natural heritage sites to gain international recognition and promote themselves on a global stage. If successful, the Scottish sites would join the 33 other World Heritage Sites already based in the UK including Stonehenge and Hadrian's Wall and global landmarks such as the Taj Mahal and the Galápagos Islands. Another Scottish site which submitted their full nominations to UNESCO earlier this year is The Flow Country, a large area of peatland across Caithness and Sutherland in the north of Scotland which plays a crucial role in supporting biodiversity. Scotland currently has six World Heritage sites which include: The Antonine Wall; Heart of Neolithic Orkney; New Lanark; the Old and New Towns of Edinburgh; St Kilda; and the Forth Bridge.

Gold for Scotland at World Men's Curling Championships

The team of Bruce Mouat, Grant Hardie, Bobby Lammie, Hammy McMillan, and Kyle Waddell clinched Scotland's first world men's gold since 2009 in Ottawa, Canada. After a mixed start to the tournament, the Scots found incredibly form and finished second in the table standings. They went on to beat Italy in the semi-finals and overcame hosts Canada in the gold medal game. Afterwards, Scotland skip Mouat said, "That was unreal! I didn't expect the final to go that way, but I'm just so proud of everyone who's been part of our team, I'm over the moon."

Scotland took gold, with Canada clinched silver and Switzerland the bronze. The Scottish team hope to replicate their success at the next Winter Olympics.

Hunt launched for Taggart treasure investigator

GCU Honorary Graduate and Cultural Fellow Blythe Duff with Taggart co-star John Michie in 2018.

Glasgow Caledonian University has launched a hunt for a PhD student to investigate an archive of Taggart scripts and memorabilia donated by Blythe Duff. The actress, who played Jackie Reid in the iconic detective show, donated scripts from 95 episodes to the university in 2018, along with a treasure trove of material from her career, including books, press cuttings, awards and rare photographs. Now academics are searching for a PhD candidate to research the archive as part of a three-year studentship. Possible research themes include the contribution of the archive to understanding the history of Scottish TV drama production and scriptwriting and the wider history of television and theatre in Scotland, from the perspective of a female actress breaking into a male-dominated industry. Professor John Cook, of Glasgow Caledonian's Department of Media and Journalism, said: "It is a really significant cultural archive. Blythe kept everything throughout her long and successful acting career. The archive gives us a new window not only into the history of Taggart and Scottish TV drama but wider Scottish culture, including tartan noir. We are delighted to offer the right student the opportunity to investigate this previously unexplored full archive."

Blythe Duff, an honorary graduate and a Cultural Fellow of Glasgow Caledonian, made her first on-screen appearance in Taggart in the episode Death Comes Softly in 1990 and was part of the final cast in the last episode screened by STV, called Ends of Justice in 2010.

First Minister nominated

Humza Yousaf has been nominated to become the sixth First Minister of Scotland, following a parliamentary vote. Mr Yousaf also announced his intention to appoint Shona Robison as Deputy First Minister. MSPs voted 71 to 57 to select Mr Yousaf as First Minister from a total of four nominees who put themselves forward; he was then formally appointed with a Royal Warrant from His Majesty King Charles III. First Minister Humza Yousaf said: "This is a really proud day for me and my family. I hope it is also a proud day for Scotland, as it speaks to our values as a country as I stand here as the first ever Muslim to lead a western democratic nation. A key priority of my government will be to protect every Scot, as far as we can, from the harm that has been inflicted by the cost-of-living crisis. We will protect and we will reform our NHS and social care and other vital public services – to support our wellbeing economy to improve the life chances of people right across our country. We will rapidly develop plans to extend childcare, improve rural housing, support small businesses, and boost innovation. The Parliament has given me the opportunity to help steer this nation's course, as we make the next stage of that journey together. Doing that will be the honour and the privilege of my life. I will strive every single minute of every day to be worthy of it and will do so in the best interests of our nation."

Mr Yousaf takes over from Scotland's longest-serving and first ever female First Minister Nicola Sturgeon, who resigned from office after more than eight years in the role.

Entry fee being considered for St Giles

One of Scotland's most famous churches, St Giles, is considering charging visitors an admission to visit for the first time in its 900 year history. Founded in the 1140s, St Giles' is considered the 'Mother Kirk' of Scotland and is an icon of Edinburgh's Royal Mile.

The charge amount has yet to be set, but is expected to be around £5, and not start until 2024. The charge would reflect sustainability rather than profitability as buildings such as St Giles' have huge costs associated with their upkeep. There are no suggestions entry fees would be imposed on worshippers, it would rather be for tourists and visitors. Other historic churches in London are also doing a fee-based system for visitors such as Westminster Abbey and St Paul's Cathedral. The Church of Scotland says the money earned will go towards maintenance costs for the building, which it says have risen to nearly £1 million per year.

Noah overtakes Jack in Baby Names chart

Noah has knocked Jack off the top of the baby name chart according to new figures from National Records of Scotland. Jack had spent 14 consecutive years at number one, but the biblical boat builder's moniker has sailed into the top spot with 373 baby boys given the name in 2022. For girls, the top name is Olivia, for the second year in a row. The name has been a long-term favourite holding the top spot in six of the previous seven years. National Records of Scotland (NRS) Statistician Daniel Burns said: "NRS is happy to welcome all the new babies of 2022. A relative flood of Noahs in the last four years has saw the name leap from 8th to 1st. There are now so many more names in use, as parents aim for something more unusual, that it takes far fewer babies to share a name for it to be high up in the charts. Back in the 70s when David was the most popular name there were upwards of 1,700 babies a year with the top boys name. Since then fertility has declined, meaning there are fewer births, but with more names in use Noah can claim the top spot with 373 baby boys given the name in 2022." Popular culture is having an impact on the names chosen for babies. Daniel explains: "Luca has climbed 20 places to land in 5th place for boys, moving into the top 10 for the first time; possibly given a boost by Luca Bish appearing on Love Island. The name Maeve has been used in a couple of different TV shows and has grown in popularity over the past few years.

Names seen on Love Island, such as Luca, Millie, Arabella and Kai have all increased since appearing on screen. Other names apparently influenced by celebrities include Lando, Tilly, Matilda and Dua." Daniel added: "The latest figures also reveal a rise in names relating to nature, with Violet, Daisy, Ivy, Wren, Dahlia, Primrose, Oakley and River all rising. Oakley and River rose for both boys and girls. Top 10 movers: For boys - Findlay, Alexander and Lewis drop out of the top 10 for boys. James, Theo and Archie are joint ninth place, the lowest position for James ever in the charts which start in 1974. For girls, the names inside the top 10 have all stayed the same but Isla, Freya and Millie have risen in the rankings while Emily, Ella and Ava have dropped. World's first rewilding centre opens near Loch Ness

Centre offers gateway to UK's largest rewilding landscape, boosting jobs and supporting re-peopling.

The world's first rewilding centre has been opened near Loch Ness in the Scottish Highlands by charity Trees for Life – showcasing how large-scale nature recovery can give people inspiring experiences, create jobs and benefit rural communities.

The Dundreggan Rewilding Centre in Glenmoriston celebrates rewilding and the region's rich Gaelic culture and offers a gateway for visitors to explore the 10,000-acre Dundreggan estate, where Trees for Life is restoring the Caledonian forest and its wildlife. "For 15 years, Dundreggan has been a beacon for rewilding our landscapes. Now it will be a beacon for rewilding people too," said Steve Micklewright, Trees for Life's Chief Executive. "This is a place of hope. We want to breathe life into the huge potential of the Highlands to help nature return in a major way – providing people from all walks of life with fantastic experiences while supporting re-peopling, boosting social and economic opportunities, and tackling the climate and nature emergencies."

The centre, eight miles from Loch Ness on the main road (A887) to the Isle of Skye developed in consultation with the local community, the free-to-access centre has been made possible thanks to the generous support of major funders. Visitors, families, schools and those with specific needs will be able to enjoy year-round events and experiences, discover how rewilding benefits wildlife such as golden eagles, red squirrels and wood ants, and learn about Gaelic culture and its deep connections to the landscape. The centre features a stunning tree sculpture of reclaimed metal, created by acclaimed artist Helen Denerley, and offers a gateway to the wild forest, with fully accessible trails, child-friendly forest experiences, and more adventurous walks. Displays in English and Gaelic introduce rewilding and the Gaelic language, and a storytelling booth showcases local history and heritage.

Affric Highlands

A café and events space offer locally sourced food and drink and entertainment areas, while a purpose-built and accessible 40-bedroom accommodation building allows people to stay for longer experiences. Twenty new jobs have already been created, employing local people, and the multi-million pound investment will generate an ongoing economic boost for local suppliers and services. The period of design and construction has already involved local businesses from architects to plumbers. Laurelin Cummins-Fraser, Dundreggan Rewilding Centre Director, said: "Whether a visitor has just an hour for a quick visit or wants to stay with us for an immersive rewilding experience, our centre will welcome people to discover stunning landscapes, unique wildlife and Gaelic culture, while connecting with the wonders of the natural world.

The Rewilding Centre is embedded in the landscape and the community. Its design is inspired by Gaelic heritage and history, and by the Caledonian forest – with verticals representing trees, changing light to reflect how light plays in woodlands, and materials and colours conjuring up bracken and forest bark. It's a really special place for people to enjoy."

Dundreggan is part of Affric Highlands, the UK's largest rewilding landscape which will potentially cover over 500,000 acres – restoring nature while strengthening land-based livelihoods and creating economic opportunities. Trees for Life launched the Affric Highlands initiative in 2021, in partnership with Rewilding Europe and an initial coalition of communities and landowners.

Twelve years and over 400 castles later: My favourite Scottish castles

By: David C Weinczok

Kisimul Castle.

Twelve years after my arrival in Scotland from Canada, I have more than made up for the lack of true castles in the country of my birth.

To date, my Scottish castle count stands at 443, almost all of which I have reached by foot, bicycle, and public transport. To answer the two very reasonable questions that spring to mind upon reading that number: yes, that's an awful lot of castles (being a touch obsessive does help), and no, they don't all start blending together. Each castle carries a distinct history and character, though I concede that some leave a more lasting mark than others. There are many reasons why people still visit these ruins of the past – a fascination with history, a sense of awe, an ancient family connection, or just a way to entertain the kids or grandkids. Each is valid, with no shortage of possibilities.

With so many castle experiences behind me, my list of favourites changes every time I try to compile one. It's worth declaring my biases first. Perhaps thanks to seeing brooding ruins in films such as The Lord of the Rings during my childhood, I have a strong preference for ruinous castles rather than fully intact and still inhabited ones. I also rule out anything built much later than 1600 AD, as the social structures which made castles a possibility and necessity were by then heavily eroded and making way for the Early Modern era. Grandiose non-defensible country houses with dozens of rooms filled with gold-framed portraits and fancy furniture hold little appeal to me. If said ruin is on the coast, even better – the juxtaposition of a crumbling tower and a body of water sates my inner Romantic. With all that said, the following five castles are ones which I love for very different reasons and want to share with as many fellow castle aficionados as possible.

Each castle carries a distinct history and character.

Kisimul Castle, Barra

Sometimes it really is the journey that makes a place. Five hours into the ferry sailing from Oban to Castlebay, having passed through a gauntlet of Highland shores lined with crumbling castles and crossed the open sea, Kisimul Castle at last comes into view. With waves lapping directly against its walls, Kisimul is the embodiment of a 'galley castle' – a type of castle found throughout coastal Scotland, but especially in the west and north, whose power is inextricable from seaways and the ships that sail them. Indeed, the Hebrides are too often referred to today as 'remote', when for most of their history they formed an 'aquapelago' with rich seaborne connections between and beyond the island chain. Kisimul was, and still is, home to the MacNeils of Barra, a family synonymous with Barra itself. The medieval MacNeils made their reputation as marauders and pirates, and Kisimul Castle has seen everything from sieges to kidnappings. Many MacNeil descendants now reside in my home Canadian province of Nova Scotia, where the surname is common. The castle fell into ruin after a fire in 1795 and further degraded during the depredations of Barra's absentee landlord, Colonel Gordon of Cluny, in the 1830s, being used as a herring curing station and stripped of much of its masonry for ballast. It was restored by Robert Lister MacNeil and gifted to the nation in 2003, for the annual rent of £1 and a bottle of Talisker whisky.

Dunnottar Castle, Aberdeenshire

Scotland is spoiled by way of incredibly impressive castles, but none of them can quite compete with the 'wow factor' of Dunnottar, near Stonehaven. Built atop a promontory lined on all sides by steep cliffs, it would not be at all out of place in an epic fantasy film. In fact, it was one of the major inspirations for DunBroch Castle in the Disney/Pixar film Brave, and was shortlisted in 2013 to be named as the 8th Wonder of the World. There was a fort here long before the stone castle was built. In the Pictish period it was known as Dùn Fhoithear, 'the fort on the shelving slope'.

It has seen major action in every period of its history. A siege by an Orcadian fleet is recorded here in 681 AD, and in 934 AD Athelstan of Wessex laid siege as Constantine II of Scotland defended it. In 1296 the castle submitted to Edward I of England, but William Wallace retook it the next year and allegedly burned the garrison alive within one of the thatched buildings. Montrose attacked unsuccessfully during his campaigning in 1645, and in 1651 Cromwell's soldiers bombarded it with cannon in an attempt to capture the Honours of Scotland held within. The Honours were secreted away by beyond enemy lines, and did not emerge again until Walter Scott rediscovered them in a sealed chamber within Edinburgh Castle in 1818. Though the castle complex itself is fairly standard with its towerhouse and stone outbuildings, the power of Dunnottar's location elevates it into the stuff of legends.

Duffus Castle, Moray

There's just something immensely satisfying about motte-and-bailey castles. I'm not sure if it's their typically circular form, a shape long associated with aesthetic perfection, or the way they rise artificially yet congruously from their landscapes. Whatever the precise nature of their appeal, Duffus Castle near Elgin is the best example of its kind in Scotland. Duffus' history speaks to two crucial stages in Scottish castle history: the 'upgrading' of many timber castles into stone ones in the 13th and early 14th centuries, and the arrival of powerful Norman, Flemish, and other Northern European knights in the late 11th and early 12th centuries.

The first castle here was a timber one begun by Freskin, a Flemish mercenary, and completed by his son, William, who took the surname 'de Moravia', which eventually became 'Moray' (modernised into 'Murray'). The later stone keep is only partially intact, with several fragments slipping down the earthen slope and giving the appearance of some great, destructive act – though the ravages are of time rather than of any siege engine. The broad top of the stone-lined bailey feels a bit like an overgrown amphitheatre, focusing the roar of jets overhead from the nearby RAF Lossiemouth airfield. One can only wonder what Freskin would make of these 'dragons' circling his castle!

Dunnottar Castle.

Duffus Castle.

Craigmillar Castle.

Craigmillar Castle, Edinburgh

I have now visited Craigmillar Castle at least twenty times, and I would not hesitate to visit twenty more. The reason? It is simply so much fun to explore! With neuks and crannies galore, two layers of curtain walls surrounding a central tower, astonishing views across Edinburgh and the Lothians, and enough architectural features to occupy even the most expert eye for days, it's the kind of place where you always discover something new with each return. It doesn't hurt that Craigmillar is one of the best-preserved medieval castle ruins in all Scotland, with a roof still over its great hall.

It dates from at least the mid-14th century, and was a favourite escape for Mary, Queen of Scots from the toxic mix of medieval Edinburgh's unsanitary streets and political machinations. Not that such machinations entirely eluded Craigmillar – the 'Craigmillar Bond', which set out to assassinate her husband, Henry Stuart, Lord Darnley, was formed here.

Mary's involvement in the Bond remains open for debate. In recent years Craigmillar has joined Doune Castle as a well-known star of the big and silver screens, having been used as a filming location for the likes of Outlander and Outlaw King. It's also dog-friendly, amazing for kids (and adults who want to unleash their inner child with foam swords on the ramparts), and endlessly entertaining to wander through.

Monimail Tower, Fife

By far the least well-known castle on this list, Monimail Tower near Cupar, Fife, is the castle a hobbit would build if they ever had the inclination. Part of its petite charm lay in the fact that it is the only surviving fragment of the much larger Palace of Monimail, a country residence of the Archbishops of St Andrews. All that is left of this grand palace is a corner tower, surrounded by a volunteer-run community garden. The vibe of Monimail Tower is somewhere between Hobbiton and Woodstock. A sign made from fragments of multi-coloured tiles welcomes all visitors. Its hall, always left open, is stuffed with binders, information panels, and interactive activities. Artists' brushes, only recently set down, lay about in the tower's dedicated arts room. Even the cheerful yellow colour of the tower itself exudes warmth and happiness. This very distinctive and warm atmosphere is thanks to the Monimail Tower Project who run activities on-site, from apple juicing and scything workshops to mini-concerts in the garden. Many castles can feel stripped of the human element that once made them what they were, and are firmly part of the past. Not so with Monimail, where people continue to reinterpret and reinvigorate it as a place for people present and future to enjoy.

The Scottish Banner is pleased to be offering the Tartan of the Month series highlighting a variety of different, unique and colourful tartans from around the world which are registered with the Scottish Register of Tartans in Edinburgh. The Scottish Register of Tartans was established by an act of the Scottish Parliament in November 2008 and promotes and preserves information about historic and contemporary tartans from Scotland and throughout the world. Text and image use are courtesy of the Scottish Register of Tartans (SRT).

Angels' Share Glass Ltd was founded in 2012 by father and daughter, Tom Young MBE and Karen Somerville. This is the official corporate tartan for their company, epitomising the beautiful glass craftsmanship of their product collections and their inherent links to Scotland's national dram whisky and its pairing partner water. The colours specific to this design embody the iconic teal blue and golds associated with the Angels' Share Glass brand, enhanced with base and overchecks in black and white. The thread count of this design captures key dates and meanings to the story of Angels' Share Glass. We see 82 threads in teal blue marking the 82 years of Tom's life - he began glassblowing from the age of 14 which is also acknowledged in the teal blue thread count. The Angels' Share is a Scottish legendary phrase associated with the evaporation process of whisky cask storage, and in 82 years anything from 56% or 81% of whisky could have evaporated from a cask in a rate of 1-2%. These numbers are also incorporated in the design with base checks of a rich gold and black representing the whisky mystically being captured by the 'Angel'.

The white overchecks notes the partnership of Tom and Karen since 2012, which is also marked with 12 bright gold threads across the main brand colour of teal blue. This tartan (SRT reference: 13150) was designed by Prickly Thistle Scotland Ltd and registered in May, 2021.

9 - J M Barrie, author of Peter Pan born. 1860

9 - The Marquis of Montrose and his Royalists camped at Auldearn near Nairn, enroute to attack Inverness. The Covenanters, reinforced by troops withdrawn from England because of the threat from Montrose, gathered at Inverness before marching overnight in an attempt to surprise Montrose at Auldearn. The Royalists won a fierce fight, killing 2000 Covenanters for the loss of 200 of their own men. 1645

10 - Rev Henry Duncan opened the world's first savings bank in Ruthwell, near Dumfries. 1810

10 - Donovan, Scottish pop and folk singer-songwriter, was born. Upon his emergence during the mid-'60s, Donovan was anointed "Britain's answer to Bob Dylan". 1946

10 - Rudolf Hess crash-landed in Scotland after his bizarre solo flight from Nazi Germany. Hitler's most trusted official and friend, he crash-landed a stolen plane at Eaglesham in an inexplicable effort to negotiate an end to the war. He died in 1987 after apparently trying to hang himself with an electrical cord. He was 93. 1941

11 - Covenanter martyrs, Margaret Lachlane, or McLachlan, and Margaret Wilson, refused to take an oath of loyalty to Charles II that acknowledged his authority on everything, including religious matters. They were tied to stakes in the Solway near Wigtown where they drowned as the tide rose. A reprieve had been sent from Edinburgh but never reached Wigtown. 1685

12 - The Black Watch regiment was commissioned under General Wade to police the Highlands. The force was known in Gaelic as Am Freiceadan Dubh, "the dark" or "black watch". The regiment's motto is Nemo Me Impune Lacessit (No One Assails Me With Impunity). 1725

12 - Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore, was crowned Queen of the United Kingdom with her husband King George VI. Queen Elizabeth was raised at Glamis Castle in Forfar. Queen Elizabeth reigned until 1952 and became known as the Queen Mother as her daughter, the current Queen Elizabeth, took the throne. 1937

12 - The Scottish Parliament reconvened with Dr Winifred M Ewing MSP as acting Presiding Officer. Her first words to the Parliament were: "The Scottish Parliament which adjourned on the 25th of March in the year 1707 is hereby reconvened." 1999

13 - The forces of Mary Queen of Scots are defeated at Battle of Langside by a confederacy of Scottish Protestants under James Stewart, the regent of her son, King James VI of Scotland. During the battle, which was fought out in the southern suburbs of Glasgow, a cavalry charge routed Mary's 6,000 Catholic troops, and they fled the field. Three days later, Mary escaped to Cumberland, England, where she sought protection from Queen Elizabeth I. 1568

13 - James Kirk was executed near Dumfries as a Covenanter refusing to swear the oath, one of the last of the wave of deaths of the "Killing Times". 1685

14 - St Andrews Society of Golfers constituted. In 1834 it became the Royal and Ancient Golf Club. Thus began the foremost club in both Scottish golf history and world golf in general. 1754

15 - Mary, Queen of Scots, married Earl of Bothwell - at 4am. Mary's third marriage to James Hepburn, the Earl of Bothwell took place in the Chapel of Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh. 1567

16 - Biographer James Boswell met Samuel Johnson for the first time. 1763

16 - The Bay City Rollers form in Edinburgh. Called the "tartan teen sensations from Edinburgh", The Bay City Rollers sold 120 million records worldwide. 1966

17 - King James V established paid judges to sit as the Court of Session, the highest civil court in Scotland. 1532

17 - Robert Tannahill drowned himself in a Paisley canal. A compassionate poet, he explored themes of love, friendship and empathy, and often used his surroundings as inspiration, taking long walks in the country around his home. He was prone to bouts of melancholy. 1810

18 - Robert the Bruce invades Isle of Man. 1313

18 - The Free Church of Scotland was founded by dissenting members of the Church of Scotland. 1843

19 - Death in Auchinleck of James Boswell, biographer of Dr Johnson. 1795

20 - Battle of Dunnichen (also known as Nechtansmere), south of Forfar in Angus, as a result of which the Picts stopped the advance northwards of the Angles of Northumbria. 685

20 - The Earl of Argyll sailed from Holland to Campbeltown with 300 men in an attempted uprising. After its failure he was executed. The rebellion was designed to place Charles II's illegitimate son, the Duke of Monmouth, on the throne. The failure of this revolt led to a close bond between the Stewart monarchy and the enemies of the Campbells in the Highlands, which was to become more apparent in the subsequent Jacobite uprisings. 1685

20 - Dunfermline, Fife, is among a record number of locations to have won prestigious city status through a competition, as part of Her Majesty The Queen's Platinum Jubilee celebrations. Dunfermline became the eighth Scottish city, joining Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Dundee, Inverness, Stirling and Perth. 2022

21 - Clocks and watches went forward for one hour as the Daylight Savings Act brought in "British Summer Time" for the first time. 1916

22 - Britain's worst train disaster at Quintinshill (near Gretna Green) in which three trains collided, with the loss of 227 lives. A troop train carrying the Seventh Royal Scots Regiment hit a stationary train and the night express from London then hit the wreckage. Two signalmen were later jailed. 1915

IN THE SCOTTISH KITCHEN

Cranachan with raspberries, whisky and cream

Ingredients:

3 tbsp. soft brown sugar
75g/2½oz. porridge oats
250ml/9fl oz. double cream, whipped until soft peaks form when the whisk is removed 75g/2½oz. cream cheese
1 tbsp. plain yoghurt
1 tbsp. icing sugar
dash whisky
50g/1¾oz. dark chocolate, chopped
30g/1oz. fresh raspberries sprig fresh mint, to garnish

Method:

Gently heat the sugar in a frying pan until golden and completely melted.

Add the oats and stir well, then pour the mixture onto a non-stick baking sheet and leave to cool. When completely cooled, break into small pieces.

Place the whipped cream, cream cheese, yoghurt, icing sugar and whisky into a bowl and mix well, then fold in the chocolate.

To serve, place half of the caramelised oats into the bottom of a serving glass. Top with half of the cream mixture, then half the raspberries. Repeat the layering with the remaining oats, cream mixture and raspberries and garnish with a sprig of mint.

Beef with whisky and mushroom cream, wilted spinach and potatoes

Ingredients:

For the beef:

3 tbsp. black peppercorns, coarsely ground, sieved, dust discarded
4 x 175g/6oz. fillet steaks, cut in half
4 tsp Dijon mustard
freshly ground pepper and sea salt
2 tbsp. sunflower oil
50g/2oz. butter
200g/7oz. fresh cep (porcini) mushrooms, thickly sliced

For the potatoes:

450g/1lb. new potatoes, scrubbed, boiled until tender
50g/2oz. butter
salt and freshly ground white pepper
3 tbsp. chopped flat leaf parsley

For the spinach:

25g/1oz. butter
500g/1lb. 2oz baby leaf spinach
3 tbsp. water
salt and freshly ground white pepper

For the whisky sauce

50ml/2fl oz. whisky
50ml/2fl oz. beef stock
50ml/2fl oz. double cream

Method:

For the steaks, spread the coarse black pepper pieces over a small plate. Coat all sides of the steaks with the Dijon mustard and then press them into the crushed peppercorns to coat.

Heat a large frying pan until very hot and add the sunflower oil. Season the steaks with salt, then add to the pan to cook for 1-2 minutes. Turn once to brown both sides (don't move the steaks around once they are in the pan or the peppercorn crust will fall off - cook to achieve a good crusty coating on each side.) Add the butter and allow it melt and turn nut-brown in colour, but don't let it burn.

Add the mushrooms and stir in the butter. As the mushrooms start to absorb the pan juices, turn the steaks again and allow them to cook for 3-4 minutes on each side, or until cooked to your liking.

Remove the steaks and place onto a baking tray and leave to rest in a warm place.

For the potatoes, place the potatoes into a large mixing bowl. Add the butter and gently crush each potato with a fork until it just splits. Season, to taste, with salt and freshly ground white pepper, and add the parsley. Mix until all the butter has been absorbed, but don't over-mash the potatoes.

For the spinach, heat a medium frying pan or wok until hot. Add the butter and the spinach and stir-fry for one minute, then add the water. Continue to stir until the spinach has wilted. Remove from the heat, season, to taste, with salt and freshly ground white pepper and set aside until ready to serve.

For the whisky sauce, add the whisky to the pan used to cook the steaks, and cook over a very high heat for one minute to boil off the alcohol. (CAUTION: the whisky may catch fire, which is perfectly acceptable, but if this worries you, have a large lid handy to place onto the pan to prevent the flames. And make sure you have your extractor fan turned off.) Add the stock and boil to reduce the liquid volume, until thickened, then add the cream. Boil to reduce the liquid volume again, scraping and stirring to loosen the stuck bits from the bottom of the pan.

Pour any juices released by the resting steaks into the sauce and stir well.

To serve, place a chefs' ring into the centre of each of four plates. Fill with the crushed potatoes and carefully remove the ring. Place a small pile of spinach onto the potatoes, and arrange two medallions of steak on top of each pile. Spoon the sauce and the mushrooms over the steak, and serve.

Celebrate Whisky Month in May with these recipes which add a splash of flavour using "the water of life". You can of course omit Whisky if preferred, enjoy and Slainte mhath! Your very good health!

Whisky flapjacks

Ingredients:

55g/2oz. oats
2 eggs, beaten
55g/2oz. self-raising flour
55g/2oz. caster sugar
vegetable oil

1 miniature whisky

To serve:

2 segments orange
fresh mint sprig

Method:

Mix together the main ingredients, except the oil and whisky, and shape into three patties. Heat a pan with a drop of oil and fry for two minutes on each side. Add the whisky to the pan, warm and carefully set alight to flambé for a few seconds.

Serve on a warm plate with the orange segments and mint sprig.

Whisky marmalade

Ingredients:

1 small grapefruit
2 lemons
1 sweet or Seville orange
1.75 litres/3 pints water
1.4kg/3lb 1oz. granulated sugar
75ml/5 tbsp. whisky

Method:

Juice the fruit and pour the juice into a large, lidded pan with a capacity of 6-8 litres/10-14 pints. Add the water. Scrape out the inner membranes and pips from the fruit with a small sharp knife. Put the membranes into a food processor or mini-chopper and chop finely. Put the chopped membranes, and any pips, into a muslin bag or a piece of muslin tied with string. Add to the pan. Shred the peel to your preferred thickness and add it to the pan. Set aside to allow the peel to soak for a few hours or, if possible, overnight. Bring the lidded pan to boil, reduce the heat and simmer very gently for two hours. The peel should be very tender. Meanwhile, preheat the oven to 140C/275F/Gas 1. Pour the sugar into a baking dish and warm in the oven for a few minutes. Remove the muslin bag from the pan and squeeze the liquid from the bag into a bowl. Pass through a sieve and add to the pan. Weigh the contents of the pan - it should be no more than 1.4kg/3lb 1oz. If you have more than this, return the contents to the pan and simmer to reduce the liquid until the correct weight is achieved. Add the warmed sugar to the pan and stir until dissolved. Gradually bring the pan to a rolling boil. After seven minutes, test the setting point by scooping out a large spoonful of the marmalade. Allow the mixture to cool a little, then slowly pour it back into the pan. If it is at the setting point, the drops will run together to form a hanging flake (this is known as the flake test). It can take up to 30 minutes to reach setting point, so keep testing. Leave the marmalade to cool for 5-10 minutes (a skin should form on the surface). Remove any scum from the surface and add the spirit of your choice to the pan. Gently stir the marmalade to evenly distribute the peel and the alcohol. Pour the marmalade into sterilised jars and seal. Leave the jars upright and undisturbed to set.

Whisky Fudge

Ingredients:

450g/1lb. granulated sugar
50g/2 oz. butter
2 tablespoons golden syrup
4 tablespoons water
8 tablespoons full cream condensed milk
1 tablespoon whisky

Method:

Put the sugar, butter, syrup, water and condensed milk in a saucepan and stir over a gentle heat until the sugar dissolves. Bring to a boil without stirring, then continue boiling until a temperature of 116C/240F is reached on a sugar thermometer, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. Remove the pan from the heat, add whisky, and beat the mixture with a wooden spoon or an electric mixer until thick, grainy and cloudy. Pour the mixture into a lightly greased 18cm/7-inch shallow square tin and leave until almost set-about 5 to 10 minutes. Using a sharp knife, mark the soft fudge into squares then leave to cool completely before cutting and removing from the tin. The fudge can be stored for up to 2 to 3 weeks in an airtight container.

MacDaddy

Ingredients:

dash whisky bitters
1 strip orange zest
25ml/1fl oz. Scotch whisky
25ml/1fl oz. ginger liqueur
lemon zest, to garnish

Method:

Place all the ingredients into a cocktail shaker with a handful of ice and stir to mix. Strain into a whiskey tumbler over ice, garnish with lemon zest and serve.

Scotland's oldest tartan discovered by Scottish Tartans Authority

John McLeish, chair, Peter MacDonald, tartan historian, of The Scottish Tartans Authority and V&A Dundee curator James Wylie.

Glen Affric tartan to go on display for the first time at V&A Dundee Tartan exhibition.

New scientific research has revealed a piece of tartan found in a peat bog in Glen Affric around forty years ago can be dated to circa 1500-1600 AD, making it the oldest known surviving specimen of true tartan in Scotland. The Scottish Tartans Authority commissioned Dye Analysis and Radiocarbon testing on the woollen textile to prove its age. The first investigation was dye analysis carried out by analytical scientists from National Museums Scotland. Using high resolution digital microscopy, four colours were visually identified for dye analysis: green and brown and possibly red and yellow.

The dye analysis confirmed the use of indigo/woad in the green but was inconclusive for the other colours, probably due to the dyestuff degradation state. However, there were no artificial or semi-synthetic dyestuffs involved in the making of the tartan, which pointed to a date of pre-1750s.

The oldest-known piece of true tartan found in Scotland

Further clarification on the age of the tartan involved radiocarbon testing at the SUERC Radiocarbon Laboratory in East Kilbride. The process involved washing out all the peat staining, which would have otherwise contaminated the carbon content of the textile.

The Radiocarbon testing results identified a broad date range between 1500 and 1655 AD, with the period between 1500 and 1600 AD the most probable. This makes it the oldest-known piece of true tartan found in Scotland – the Falkirk ‘tartan’, dating from the early third century AD, is actually a simpler check pattern woven using undyed yarns. The Glen Affric tartan, which measures around 55cm by 43cm has gone on display for the first time at V&A Dundee’s Tartan exhibition.

The piece will be the oldest exhibit among more than 300 objects. The exhibition examines tartan’s universal and enduring appeal through iconic and everyday examples of fashion, architecture, graphic and product design, photography, furniture, glass and ceramics, film, performance and art.

Peter MacDonald, Head of Research and Collections at The Scottish Tartans Authority, said: “The testing process has taken nearly six months, but the effort was well worth it and we are thrilled with the results! In Scotland, surviving examples of old textiles are rare as the soil is not conducive to their survival. As the piece was buried in peat, meaning it had no exposure to air and was therefore preserved. The tartan has several colours with multiple stripes of different sizes, and so it corresponds to what people would think of as a true tartan. Although we can theorise about the Glen Affric tartan, it’s important that we don’t construct history around it. Although Clan Chisholm controlled that area, we cannot attribute the tartan to them as we don’t know who owned it. The potential presence of red, a colour that Gaels considered a status symbol, is interesting because of the more rustic nature of the cloth. This piece is not something you would associate with a king or someone of high status; it is more likely to be an outdoor working garment.”

National and historical significance

John McLeish, Chair of The Scottish Tartans Authority, said: “The Glen Affric tartan is clearly a piece of national and historical significance. It is likely to date to the reign of James V, Mary Queen of Scots, or James VI/I. There is no other known surviving piece of tartan from this period of this age. It’s a remarkable discovery and deserves national attention and preservation. It also deserves to be seen and we’re delighted that it is to be included in the Tartan exhibition at V&A Dundee.”

James Wylie, curator at V&A Dundee, added: “We knew The Scottish Tartans Authority had a tremendous archive of material and we initially approached them to ask if they knew of any examples of ‘proto-tartans’ that could be loaned to the exhibition. I’m delighted the exhibition has encouraged further exploration into this plaid portion and very thankful for The Scottish Tartans Authority’s backing and support in uncovering such a historic find. To be able to exhibit the Glen Affric tartan is immensely important in understanding the textile traditions from which modern tartan derives, and I’m sure visitors will appreciate seeing this on public display for the very first time.”

Tartan at V&A Dundee is on until 14 January 2024. For details see: www.vam.ac.uk/dundee

Five reasons to visit the Moncton Highland Games

The Petitcodiac River rises as much as 75 metres (or 25 feet) in a short burst of time, creating an epic wave that flows through between the City of Moncton and the Town of Riverview – right behind the Hal Betts Sportsplex, where the annual Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival are held. The Tidal Bore is known to attract adventurous surfers from around the world!

4. Cheer on the Sheep

Or maybe you'll cheer for the dogs! Each year local sheep dogs show off their herding skills on site, with demonstrations ongoing throughout the day. You can follow the process from sheep to shawl, with shearing and weaving demonstrations on site, too. (PS: Don't forget to visit the nearby petting zoo, including our Highland Cows, and enjoy a horse and wagon ride around the grounds – all included in the price of admission to the grounds.)

5. Eat Haggis, Drink Local, and Sing Loud

Whether it's the Haggis Poutine or an Alma Lobster roll, you're sure to find something purely Scottish Canadian to enjoy at the Greater Moncton Highland Games! Our Pub Tent, located next to the food vendors, offers some of New Brunswick's best ales, wines, and spirits -- and the Highlands Stage is hopping with music with the likes of Gaelic singer Patricia Murray, fiddler Ivan Hicks, Cape Breton's Nathan Bishop MacDonald, the Landry Highland Dancers, and more!

The 17th annual Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival takes place June 13 – 17, 2023. There are free community concerts, flag raisings, a 'try it' heavies event and pub night Friday, and a full day of entertainment and competitions on Saturday. Visit the petting zoo with Highland cows, sign up for the 5KM Tartan Run, watch the dancers, pipers, drummers, swordfighters, blacksmith, spinners, weavers, sheep herders and shearers, and enjoy wagon rides, bouncy castles, and more fun for the whole family. Admission is just $10/ person or $25/family, with children 12 & under free. Held on the third weekend in June, the Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival is a great way to kick off your Maritime summer!

For more information or to keep up with the Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival see:
www.monctonhighlandgames.com or www.facebook.com/monctonhighlandgame

Every Highland Games around the world comes with special touches that make a visit unique. Jenna Morton, Event Manager for the Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival in New Brunswick, Canada, shares five things to watch for at their event, June 13 – 17, 2023.

1. Catch a surfer on the Tidal Bore

A what now? It's a Maritime phenomenon. The Tidal Bore is the name given to a massive wave that makes its way down the Petitcodiac River twice a day, thanks to the immense tides of the Bay of Fundy. These are the highest tides in the world!

2. Brandish a Broadsword or a Longbow

Merida might not be on site, but there will be archers with bows at the ready for you to try. This is always a favourite stop for young and old! There are also fly-tying demonstrations and a chance to give fly-casting a try, too. If you own your own broadsword, please don't bring it to the field – unless you've signed up for the Maritime Sword School's competition, of course! This organization is working to bring back a centuries-old practice of learning the art of swordsmanship with the introduction of single stick training and competitions locally. They were very well received at the 2022 event and we're excited to welcome them back for 2023.

3. Throw a Tree Trunk in the Air

We know, the Caber Toss and the rest of the Heavy Events aren't necessarily unique to these games. But the Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival is a great training ground for would-be athletes with high expectations. The Moncton Games has hosted the Canadian Scottish Athletic Federation's Open Professional and Lightweight championships, as well as the 2022 SMAI Masters World Championships. Come see if you could join the ranks of the strongest men and women in the world with our 'Give it a Try' workshop on Friday night – including a chance at the Caber - then watch the veteran competitors on Saturday!

Remembering boxing great Ken Buchanan

In 2000 Ken was the first living British boxer to be elected to the International Boxing Hall of Fame. Edinburgh's Lord Provost Robert Aldridge has paid tribute to Ken Buchanan MBE and said: "Edinburgh has lost one of its most renowned sons with the death of boxing legend Ken Buchanan at the age of 77. Born in Leith in 1945, Ken Buchanan would go on to become Scotland's first undisputed world champion and was once voted 'Britain's Greatest Ever Boxer' by the Boxing News. Ken won a huge local fan base for putting Edinburgh firmly on the map and in 2016 he was presented with the Edinburgh Award. It is very fitting that his famous fighting hands have been immortalised on a flagstone outside the City Chambers. Throughout his life, he showed great appreciation for his native city and its people, and just last August crowds gathered to celebrate as a statue of Ken was unveiled at a public ceremony on Leith Walk. Our city mourns one of its most celebrated sons. May he rest in peace and I'm sure his legacy will be longstanding." A bronze statue of Ken was unveiled by the former Lord Provosts of the City of Edinburgh, Frank Ross and Donald Wilson, on 14th August 2022 outside the St James Quarter at the top of Leith Walk.

Scottish boxing legend Ken Buchanan MBE has passed away at aged 77 in Edinburgh. Ken is regarded as the finest Lightweight ever to come out of Scotland and won the World Lightweight Championship in 1970 and is widely regarded within boxing circles as the best post war British fighter.

country lifestyle were also included in the show. The big winner here was Scottish cashmere, tweed, and tartan.

The show featured fabulous kilts and tartan looks worn by notable, celebrities and acclaimed professionals from Scotland, the United States, and various parts of the globe. Models who graced the runway included Edward Beyers, SEAL Team Six and US Congressional Medal of Honor recipient; Taylor Winyard, Scottish rower who holds a record for rowing across the Atlantic; Lesley Paterson, Scotland's latest heroine and 2023 Oscar winner for All Quiet on the Western Front; and Lucy Sophia Thompson, current Miss Scotland. And for the first time ever, the show included a member of the clergy. The Rev. Canon Dana Corsello, the Vicar of the National Cathedral in Washington D.C., made her runway debut wearing the World Peace Tartan kilt. Other models included

Scotland's most famous fashion show, Dressed to Kilt (DTK), celebrated its 20th anniversary with a massive sold-out show in Washington with over 65 looks. The show took place on Saturday, April 1, 2023 at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, DC, exactly 20 years to the day of the first show in New York City on April 1, 2003. This year's theme is "Country Cool- Fashion for the Outdoors" highlighting looks inspired by hunting, shooting, fishing, camping, riding, hiking, and other outdoor activities. A number of Scotland's top designers participated in this show including Calzeat, Glenisla Kilts, Harris Tweed Hebrides, House of Cheviot, Kinalba Scottish Cashmere, Lorna Gillies, Strathmore Woolen Mills, Slanj, Totty Rocks and Walker Slater. Several American designers that utilize traditional Scottish fabrics that are not only suited for the catwalk but also the outdoor former Navy SEALs, high-profile athletes from both sides of the Atlantic, news anchors, politicians, several fearless female veterans, and a few furry friends including a Scottish terrier and a live falcon and a former Navy SEAL carrying a huge Scottish salmon down the runway.

The largest and most prestigious Scottish fashion event in the world

Mid-show the attendees were treated to a special performance by Scottish singer and Tik Tok sensation, Nati Dredd. This year's show also remembered three of Scotland's greatest supporters, Queen Elizabeth II, Sir Sean Connery, co-founder of Dressed to Kilt, and Dame Vivienne Westwood, a huger supporter of Dressed to Kilt.

Proceeds from the evening will benefit the Navy SEAL Foundation. During the after-party the founders of the event received a serious invitation to hold the next Dressed to Kilt outside of the United States for the first time ever.

From its genesis in 2003, DTK is now the largest and most prestigious Scottish fashion event in the world, and one of the highest profile fashion shows in the United States. They believe that fashion, without the enrichment of diverse cultures, becomes hollow. The show is produced by the Friends of Scotland charity which was co-founded by Sir Sean Connery in 2002. In addition to supermodels, this show highlights very accomplished men and women on the runway and it is also filled with A-List celebrities and athletes from both sides of the Atlantic. In recent shows Sir Sean Connery, Gerard Butler, Alan Cumming, Kiefer Sutherland, Kyle MacLachlan, Chris "Mr. Big" Noth, Mike Myers, Brian Cox and Craig Ferguson have all walked the runway. The charity has raised significant sums for the families of wounded veterans.
