The Banner Says...

Edinburgh-Flowering of the Human Spirit

by Sean Cairney

t would have been the late 1980's when I first visited Edinburgh in August, and during the buzz of Edinburgh festival season.

That summer I managed to make it to a couple of Fringe shows and also my first Edinburgh Military Tattoo (it was not titled 'Royal' until 2010).

Though I had been to Edinburgh before, never had I experienced the buzz and energy of August.

A world leading festival city

2022 is the 75th anniversary of Edinburgh's evolution as a world leading festival city. The concept for the very first Edinburgh International Festival (EIF) began soon after World War Two finished and it was an Austrian, Sir Rudolf Bing, who had fled Nazi occupied Germany and thought that the UK should have an international cultural festival and Edinburgh was put forward. The first EIF took place in August 1947, and so too did the first Edinburgh Fringe which is today the world's largest arts festival and also the Edinburgh International Film Festival (originally called the International Festival of Documentary Films), which is the oldest continually running film festival in the world.

The Fringe however has its roots as an unplanned festival with theatre companies and performers staging shows in Edinburgh at the same time and not part of the official EIF program, these would become known as "Fringe Adjuncts" or those on the fringe of the main festival.

These fringe acts soon became sought after by audiences and its very own festival was born. By 1950 the first Edinburgh Military Tattoo also joined Edinburgh's August program and during the 1980's the Edinburgh International Book Festival was added to the calendar.

These events now host tens of thousands of performers, who put on thousands of shows across Edinburgh for a global audience who converge on the streets of Auld Reekie just as I first did all those years ago. For those who may not know Auld Reekie is the term Edinburgh is affectionately known as. Auld Reekie is Scots for 'Old Smokey', a nickname which was given back when smoke from open coal and peat fires filled the city air like a fog. Some may also know Edinburgh as the 'Athens of the North', a term which was used more as the New Town was developed and the various monuments which followed.

In this issue

For those lucky enough to be in Edinburgh this month we feature some of the incredible and open spaces the city has to offer around Holyrood. At the opposite end of the Royal Mile to Edinburgh Castle lies some beautiful and rugged spaces. I have gone 'walkies' with friends and their dogs in Holyrood Park and also made it to the top of Arthur's Seat for some amazing views of the capital. Though the latter certainly requires some level of fitness. This month's feature by David McVey reminds us that Edinburgh does in fact rest on the remains of an extinct volcano that erupted 350 million years ago!

2022 is Scotland's Year of Stories and the activities are continuing throughout the year. Stories make up so much of Scotland's history, folklore and tradition. From that in the printed form to passed down verbal tales that help make up how Scots see themselves.

Scotland has a particularly rich heritage of stories and storytelling to spotlight and celebrate and we hear from VisitScotland who are managing this fantastic year of events. For those not visiting Scotland in 2022 remember many of the locations being highlighted will be there waiting for when you can next travel.

The Panama Canal is a 51 mile/82 km waterway that connects the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and is considered one of the greatest engineering feats of the 20th century. Some may be surprised, like me, that a Scottish vessel from Renfrew was a key part of its construction. This is just one other example of how 'Clydebuilt' went on to shape the world.

Edinburgh named best city to visit in the world

Just in time for the summer tourist season Edinburgh has also been ranked as the top city to visit in the world in a recent poll. The Scottish capital has topped a list of 53 cities based on interviews with more than 20,000 people about life in their hometowns by Time Out magazine. Edinburgh scored highly across the board, coming top for both the number of residents who thought the city was beautiful (95%) and those who deemed it walkable (93%), as well as 88% saying it is easiest to express who you are.

The very first Edinburgh International Festival was born as Europe healed after war and its aim then was to 'provide a platform for the flowering of the human spirit'.
As Scotland's capital welcomes the world to its cobbled streets this month and after the last couple of years of the pandemic across the world and as war is again on Europe's door, its original purpose rings just as true as it did 75 years ago.

Do you have printer's ink in your blood? Raban's descendants sought on 400th anniversary of printing

he printed word changed the world, bringing books and newspapers into circulation and providing a vehicle for sharing new ideas as well as science, history and culture. In July Aberdeen celebrated the 400th anniversary of the birth of printing in the city and experts from the University of Aberdeen and Robert Gordon University (RGU) are coming together with others from across Scotland to mark the important milestone.

A series of events and an exhibition will tell the story of Aberdeen's first printer, Edward Raban, who set up the region's first printing press in Castle Street in 1622.

Laird of Letters

As part of the celebrations, RGU's Professor Peter Reid joined the University of Aberdeen's Professor Paul Mitchell to explore new insights on Raban's life at a free seminar 'Edward Raban: Up Close'. And Professor Reid is seeking the help of the north-east public to try and track down relatives who may have the printer's ink in their blood. He explains: "Raban was both industrious and ambitious, producing one hundred and fifty titles in twenty-seven years. He called himself the 'Laird of Letters' and was engaged in the political, religious and civic questions of the day. Yet, for all that, he is an elusive figure. As part of our 400th anniversary celebrations, we are hoping to track down descendants that might still be living in the north-east. Raban is not a particularly common name so we are interested in anyone who has it in their ancestry. We also know that his daughter, Elizabeth, married Gavin Milne in Aberdeen in 1648. This is a name appears much more frequently in this region but they had four children, Isobel (b 1649), James (b 1652), William (b 1653), and Robert (b 1654). So, if any of these names appear in your family tree, we'd love to hear from you."

The innovation of printing

Raban was a well-travelled Englishman who came to Aberdeen at the invitation of Sir Paul Menzies and Bishop Patrick Forbes. He printed under the sign of 'The Townes Armes' and this continued to be the sign-board of the Aberdeen Printers for at least one hundred years. Much of Raban's output was for the University and the City, but in 1623 he produced his 'Prognostication' or Almanac, a collection of writing about the preceding year. This continued annually and became the Aberdeen Almanac which records a wide range of information.

Jennifer Shaw, Assistant Curator of Museums and Special Collections at the University of Aberdeen, said: "The innovation of printing enabled people to share knowledge quicker and more widely, changing the way people communicated and social relationships. Edward Raban was fundamental to bringing about these changes in Aberdeen and left a legacy that could be felt for centuries. In 2022 - 400 years on from his arrival in Aberdeen and the printing of his first material - it is fitting that we celebrate his life, legacy and the transformational influence he had on this region."

The university events form part of a wider celebration of Raban at 400 taking place across the city.

Scot of the Year Award 2022

The Scottish Studies Society invites you and your friends and family to its annual Scot of the Year Award event on September 9th during which we will pay tribute to this year's recipient: internationally acclaimed historian Margaret MacMillan.

The venue for this year's event will be Seeley Hall in the University of Toronto's Trinity College. It will be a magnificent evening of fine food, music and dance.

The international demands on Margaret's schedule are currently higher than ever and so this is a wonderful opportunity for us to spend time with her while she is still in Canada and before she departs to continue her assignments in the UK and elsewhere for the rest of the year.

The dress code for the evening will be formal (black tie or Highland dress) so this is your chance to dress up for one of the most sophisticated events in the Scots-Canadian calendar.

This will be our first in-person event since the onslaught of the pandemic and so we do hope you will be able to join us for this memorable evening, the proceeds of which will go to support the Scottish Studies Foundation, a registered Canadian charity established to raise awareness of the Scottish heritage in Canada through education at the university level. Clan Buchanan to reunite as Chief

I recently had the pleasure of reading your Scottish Banner, and thoroughly enjoyed it. It is the first newspaper that have actually read every article. Really an excellent paper. I am hoping you or one of your readers can help me with these attached photos In 1970 during Commonwealth Games, I worked for Ushers Breweries at a pub in Princess St, and at the entrance to the stadium. The manager gave me this and said it would be worth a lot one day. But don't know what it was used for. I have written to a museum In Edinburgh, but i never heard back from them. So I am hoping someone could tell me more about it? I believe Ushers Breweries do not exist anymore. Thanking you Fred Ericsen-Miller 17 Typha Place Elanora, Queensland

My Buchanan great-great grandparents emigrated to Australia in 1853, settling in the gold mining town of Mt Blackwood in Victoria where they raised six daughters and two sons. I am a descendant from their third daughter. It delights me beyond words that the clan has a Chief again. lostredsock via Instagram

First saw him at Kings Buildings Union Edinburgh circa 1967/8. My face was sore laughing! I particularly remember the "Come Dancing" skit, so funny. Also enjoyed his banjo playing. Thanks for the memories Billy and congratulations on your award, well deserved.

PipingLive!

I am very excited to be heading to Glasgow this August and was so glad to read about PipingLive! in the July issue. I thought how lucky was I to be going during the World Pipe Band Championships, and to now read there is a whole week of pipes and drums to be had when I am actually there is fantastic. We have family in Paisley and East Kilbride and will be with them as my base as I get to travel around. Scotland packs in so much for me with all the great scenery, history, events and if I am lucky the weather! I love everything about it and love going to the Highland Games as well when in Scotland, also here in Canada.

The Scottish Banner definitely whet's my appetite for all things Scottish. David Gillies Ajax, Ontario Canada

Scottish Identity Overseas

Hello descendant Scots! I'm Campbell, a current undergraduate student at the University of St Andrews in Scotland. This summer, I am conducting research into the Scottish identity as felt by Scottish expats the Scottish diaspora. I am circulating a survey for people whose ancestors are from Scotland or who have an affinity to Scotland. If you are a descendant Scot living overseas, I would love to invite you to get involved with my research by filling out a short (5 min) survey about Scotland, your Scottish identity, and how being Scottish impacts your life overseas.

The Northern Meeting Piping Competition launches first-ever live stream

he Northern Meeting Piping Competition, held at Eden Court in Inverness and renowned as the most prestigious piping competition in the world, will be livestreamed for the first time ever on Thursday 1st September 2022. Several of the events from world's greatest non-invitational indoor solo piping competition will be available to watch for just £15 from the comfort of your own home, including the Gold Medal and The Former Winners March, Strathspey and Reel with more events over the two days planned to be added in future years. The Gold Medal will start at 8.30am (GMT) on Thursday 1st September followed by The Former Winners March, Strathspey and Reel at around 5pm (GMT) on the same platform.

Piping is at the heart of Scotland's identity

Sir Patrick Grant, from The Northern Meeting Piping Competition, said: "We're delighted to unveil this new ticketed live stream option for this year. The piping community is international, and we hope by making this prestigious competition more accessible to everyone more people will be able to enjoy it both at home here in Scotland and abroad. Piping is at the heart of Scotland's identity and the Northern Meeting plays a key part in promoting this rich musical heritage among Scots, and friends of Scotland, across the world - we believe this will only be improved with the introduction of this live streaming element this year."

The Gold Medal for the classical piobaireachd music and the Gold Clasp for former winners are the most sought-after achievements for any piper. The honour attached to such success attracts pipers from across the British Isles, USA, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Northern Ireland and Europe.

The oldest musical competition in the world

Entry to the competition is restricted to those of the highest calibre and the bar is set high with only around 100 competitors selected to take part in the various events. These include the classic Piobaireachd, March, Strathspey and Reel and Hornpipes and Jigs. The competition also caters for younger players with around 30 to 40 young competitors each year. This year the Northern Meeting Competition will welcome young players from all over Scotland, as well as some from Canada and New Zealand. This will take be available to watch in-person on Friday 2nd September and won't be part of the live-streaming option. In-person tickets to the two-day event will be available to purchase at Eden Court on the competition days.

Held in Inverness since 1841, the Northern Meeting is the oldest musical competition in the world. It's dedicated to Scotland's unique form of theme and variations played solely on the Highland Bagpipe, known as piobaireachd or pibroch.

Live stream tickets are priced at just £15 and once purchased they will provide access live on the day and for the month of September. They are on sale now at https://piping.northern-meeting.org/competition-live-stream/.

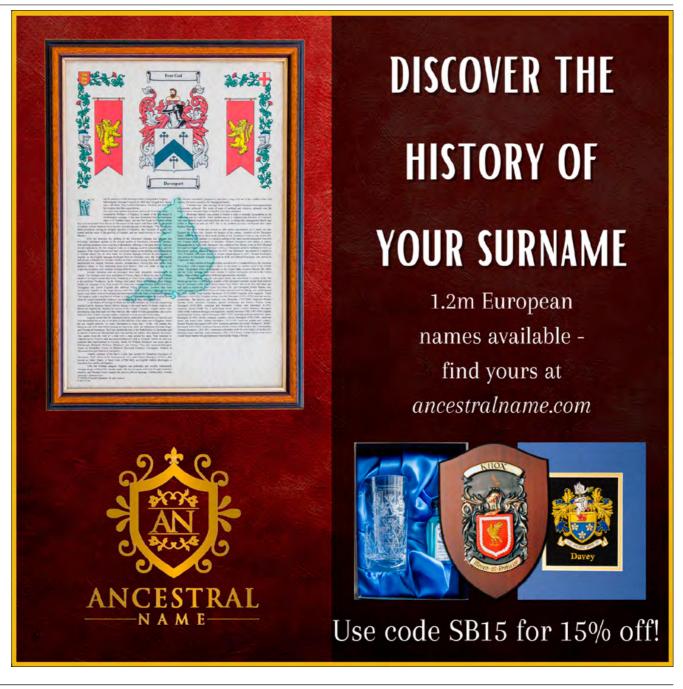

ack for 2022 with 9 pipe bands, Clan Row featuring up to 20 Clans, Scottish heavy events, Celtic vendors and more. Friday evening only starting at 6:30PM Tuatha Dea from Gatlinburg, Tennessee. The Mudmen from Canada will be performing Saturday along with Emerald Isle, Tuatha Dea, Celtic Creek, Waterhorse, Step n time, to mention a few along with an old fashion fiddle session.

Coming August 26th and Aug 27th at Mayville Lakeside Park, Mayville, NY. For details see: www.facebook.com/JamestownRegionalCelticFestival or www.96thhighlanders.com.

SCOTSPEAK

Scotspeak is a selection of quotes which made headlines in Scotland last month on a variety of current Scottish affairs.

"Studying and living in Dundee for three years allowed me to fall in love with the city and that made it easy to write about. There are many different parts to my novel, but I hope that my love for Dundee comes across to the readers. The book has had such a positive reaction here in Lithuania and that has been incredibly flattering."

Lithuanian author Aldona Tüür said she has used her experience of living and working in Dundee as a basis for her first novel, Kilt Hire. The book is set in Dundee and about a woman who worked in a kilt hire shop. After being published at the beginning of the year, the book has subsequently gone on to sell hundreds of copies in her native Lithuania, becoming one of the best-selling titles in the country. Aldona is hopeful that there may be demand for Kilt Hire to be published in English.

"I have been playing the bagpipes for twelve years now, since my dad first started teaching me. I can never say thank you enough to him as it has provided me with so many wonderful opportunities, such as serving as the Chancellor's Bagpiper. I was appointed in November 2020 during Covid, and so my first official duty was to play in a recording for virtual graduation. It was so unique but totally worthwhile as I hope it provided a bit of normality for those graduating in such bizarre times. Since then, I have been lucky enough to play for in-person graduation ceremonies, graduation dinners, Burns suppers, and various fundraising events.

This role has given me experiences and memories I will forever remember and so I would like to thank the University for providing me with this opportunity."

St Andrews graduate and the University Chancellor's Piper, Alistair Robinson from Galashiels, said as he graduated from the University of St Andrews with an MA (Hons) Modern History, then piped the procession through the town after his own ceremony. A St Andrews graduate made history today as the first student to pipe his own academic success at graduation. The Chancellor's Piper plays at official University events and graduations, leading the new graduates and academic procession from the Younger Hall to St Salvator's Quad after each ceremony.

"Glasgow is extremely well placed and should clearly be the frontrunner in the UK. However, Ukraine does still seek to host the Eurovision song contest if they are able and I think they need to be given the time and space to explore that as much as possible. Council understands that although early discussions have taken place about the possibility of Glasgow acting as host or co-host of the 2023 contest should a replacement city be necessary, these must remain hypothetical and high level until such a time as it may be confirmed that Ukraine is not in a position to host. If that is confirmed and the UK government seeks  $expressions\ of\ interest\ from\ potential\ hosts,$ council instructs the chief executive to submit on Glasgow's behalf."

Glasgow City Council leader Susan Aitken said that Scotland's largest city is preparing to launch a bid to host the Eurovision song contest next year if Ukraine is unable due to the ongoing Russian invasion.
Glasgow has also been named the bookies' favourite to host Eurovision, ahead of London and Birmingham which make up the second and third favourites.

"We understand the scale of the challenge and are fully dedicated to honouring this building and its place within the future of Edinburgh. We knew that one day the Jenners building would be standing vacant, and we would have the moral obligation of bringing it back to its former glory. We do hope that we can build support to fulfil this highly important task. This project seeks to secure the future of the Jenners building for generations to come. The original Jenners building will always stay and is the very DNA of our plans, with the redevelopment of a vibrant, sustainable and accessible department store being the heart of the project."

Anders Krogh of AAA United A/S said as plans have been submitted to turn the iconic Edinburgh department store location into a mixed retail and hotel space, which will include a rooftop bar. Jenners, also described as 'the Harrods of the North', has occupied the prime location on Princes Street for 184 years.

"We thought there would be lots of medieval fortifications, musket balls and things like that, but instead we found lots of Neolithic artefacts such as flints and stone arrowheads. It was really unexpected and suggests that people were sitting here making these things. These artefacts would've been used as tools, for hunting and gathering."

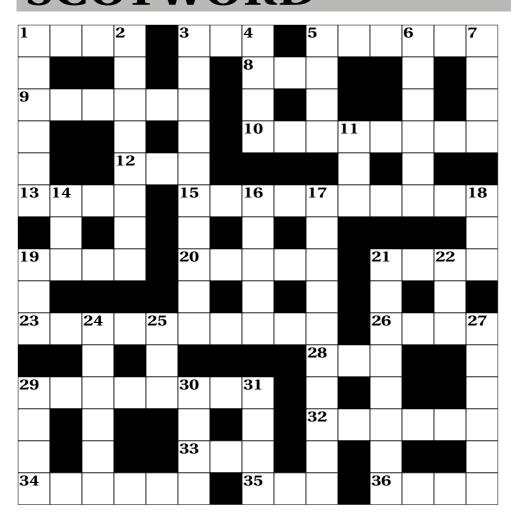

Archaeologist Ian McHardy said that items found during a recent archaeological dig near Stornoway, Isle of Lewis revealed people had inhabited the area early than thought. The recovered items are thought to date back to 2,000BC, which is much older than the thought earliest settlement on the island of 800AD.

"Illegal metal detecting is a serious offence which can result in significant harm and loss to Scotland's historic past. The detection and prosecution of these offences at Dunadd have been the result of a concerted effort by the Police, the Crown Office and Historic Environment Scotland, to ensure that we continue to protect that history and preserve it for generations to come."

Police Inspector Alan Dron, Police Scotland Rural Crime Coordinator and Chair of the Scottish Heritage Crime Group, has welcomed sentencing in the case of irreversible damage to Dunadd Fort in Kilmartin Glen following illegal metal detecting and excavation. Irreversible damage to one of Scotland's most important early medieval monuments occurred after metal artefacts were removed by members of the public with metal detecting instruments. Dunadd is located in the prehistoric landscape of Kilmartin Glen which has one of the most important concentrations of Neolithic and Bronze Age remains in mainland Scotland.

Milestone reached as Scotland's flag centre re-opens at the birthplace of Scotland's flag

cotland's flag heritage centre has reopened in the East Lothian village of Athelstaneford the birthplace of Scotland's flag. The centre, housed in the 16th century Hepburn doocot, tells the story of the battle of Athelstaneford where legend has it a white saltire appeared above an army of Picts and Scots inspiring them to victory. The successful £100k restoration has secured the building for the future with extensive exterior repairs carried out by specialists using traditional techniques.

The project is the first in a series of major improvements planned for the birthplace of Scotland's flag. David Williamson chair of the Scottish Flag Trust said: "This has been a major project and great to see the building restored and looking its best. With the building secure we hope the public will get behind our funding drive at www.saltire.scot to radically improve the birthplace of Scotland's flag."

The St Andrew's Cross or Saltire is Scotland's national flag. Tradition has it that the flag, the white saltire on a blue background, the oldest flag in Europe originated in a battle fought in East Lothian, near the village of Athelstaneford.

Today the flag flies proudly all year round from the Saltire Memorial in Athelstaneford Parish Churchyard to celebrate this special connection.

The history of the battle and the adoption of the Saltire as the symbol of Scotland is told in the Flag Heritage Centre through a unique audio-visual presentation.

The Scottish Flag Trust promotes the Saltire as a welcoming symbol for all Scots whether they are Scots by birth, by choice or through their family roots.

Restoration and renewal

The Scottish Flag Trust is a registered Scottish charity which maintains the Saltire Memorial and the Flag Heritage Centre at Athelstaneford and promotes the proper use of the Saltire. The restoration and renewal project will see a new accessible pathway with interpretive timeline telling the history and adoption of Scotland's national flag from 834AD to the present. New landscaping and engraved paving around the Saltire Memorial will tell the story of St Andrew's and Scot's societies across the globe. A new immersive audiovisual experience telling the story of the Battle of Athelstaneford and the creation and adoption of Scotland's national flag.

Legend of the Saltire

The St Andrew's Cross or Saltire is Scotland's national flag. Tradition has it that the flag, the white saltire on a blue background, as the oldest flag in both Europe and the Commonwealth, it originated in an East Lothian battle which took place in the year 832AD. An army of Picts under Angus mac Fergus, High King of Alba, and aided by a contingent of Scots led by Eochaidh (Kenneth mac Alpin's grandfather) had been on a punitive raid into Lothian (then and for long afterwards Northumbrian territory), and were being pursued by a larger force of Angles and Saxons under one Athelstan.

The Albannach/Scots were caught and stood to face their pursuers in the area of Markle, near East Linton.

This is to the north of the modern village of Athelstaneford (which was re-sited on higher ground in the 18th century), where the Peffer, which flows into the Firth of Forth at Aberlady forms a wide vale. Being then wholly undrained, the Peffer presented a major obstacle to crossing and the two armies came together at the ford near the present-day farm of Prora (one of the field names there is still the Bloody Lands).

Fearing the outcome of the encounter, King Angus led prayers for deliverance and was rewarded by seeing a cloud formation of a white saltire (the diagonal cross on which St Andrew had been martyred) against a blue sky. The king vowed that if, with the saint's help, he gained the victory, then Andrew would thereafter be the patron saint of Scotland. The Scots did win, and the Saltire became the flag of Scotland. When Kenneth mac Alpin, who may have been present with his grandfather at the battle, later united Picts and Scots and named the entity Scotland, Andrew did indeed become the patron saint of the united realm. Kenneth mac Alpin, King of Scots and Picts, Ard-righ Albainn, was laid to rest on Iona in 860AD.

19 World Records Topple at Moncton Highland Games Chieftain enlists athletes, attendees in battle against climate change

oments of reverence were found among the revelry at the 16th annual Greater Moncton ■ Highland Games & Scottish Festival, host of the 2022 SMAI Masters World Championships. The return to in-person events after a two-year hiatus touched each part of the international event with a tinge of celebration. The heavy events athletes and their fans cheered again and again as personal bests and world records were set. The crowd grew silent and touched by solemnity when Elsipogtog tradition bearer Joan Miliea welcomed them in Mi'kmaq with the Humbling Song and Honourary Chieftain Michael Yellowlees called on them to join him in the battle against climate change.

The largest Masters World Championships

Hosting the largest Masters World Championships to date was an ambitious endeavour for an organization that only had 13 full in-person Highland Games under its sporran before now – but with true Scottish tenacity, a small and dedicated group of volunteers (with one part-time paid event manager) created a world-class event that celebrated art, music, culture, and the best of Maritime hospitality.

On one side of the complex, attendees watched as Midas Well Creations painted a reimagined Loch Ness monster while musical group after musical group took to the Lowlands Stage. Nearby, historical sword fighting techniques were tested in competition while blacksmiths Dave Bell and Kyle Strutt showcased their craft. Across the parking lot filled with food trucks, craft beer tents, and the Highlands Stage humming with musical performances, vendors filled the spaces between Clan tents, fly tying and archery demonstrations. The workshop tent was filled with learning for two days.

Sheep shearing and spinning took place nearby, and local authors read from their Scottish-inspired children's books.
Enterprising families enjoyed horse & wagon rides around the property to get an overview before diving into their favourite activities.

Eight East Coast pipe bands competed, with Dartmouth & District's Grade 4 band capturing the Merrill Henderson Trophy for Band of the Day. Cameron MacNeil of the Cape Breton University band was Piper of the Day, while College of Piping's Austin Trenholm won Drummer of the Day honours. In the highland dance tent, 125 dancers competed, with local perpetual awards presented to Nara Cooke (the Ferris Leanne Tweedie Memorial Trophy) and Hannah Clarke (the Wallace & Corena Tweedie Memorial Trophy).

Scotland's Michael Yellowlees presided over the Games as Honourary Chieftain, a recognition of his journey across Canada in 2021, during which he and his canine companion, Luna, raised £50,000 for the Scottish rewilding charity Trees for Life. In true Chieftain fashion, Yellowlees used the opportunity to recruit followers for his next battle: he and Luna are again travelling across Canada, this time to raise money for the Nature Conservancy of Canada.

International World Records

On the heavy events field, athletes from around the world set personal bests and brought down 18 Scottish Masters Athletics International World Records. Competing for the 10th time at the Masters, Larry Sisseck represented the 70+ class alone, setting world records in that class for the Light Hammer (88'), Weight over Bar (13'4"), Light Weight for Distance (50'3.5"), and Heavy Weight for Distance (34'4"). Hall of Famer Sue Hallen set three world records for the Women's 65-69 class, in Open Stone (24'4.5"), Heavy Hammer (61'9"), and Light Hammer (76'10"). New Brunswick's Dirk Bishop, who came out of retirement to compete, set world records in the Men's 55-59 Lightweight for Distance (64'3"), Light Hammer (109'8"), and Heavy Hammer (85'8").

In the Men's 65-69 class, Mark Buchannan set world records in Weight over Bar (16'), Heavyweight for Distance (39'1.5") and Lightweight for Distance (52'5.25"). Dale Gehman set a Lightweight for Distance record of 61"5.5" in Men's 60-64 and Mike Zolkiewicz's 22'4" in Weight over Bar set a new record for Men's 40-44. Teresa Nystrom set a new record for Heavyweight for Distance for Women's 55-59 at 44'5" and Sylvana Bomholt set an Open Stone records of 34'5.75" for Women's 45-49. Women's Lightweight saw Nicole Davis with a record-setting 18'6" in Weight over Bar, and Hall of Famer Denise Houseman set an Open Stone record of 29'3" in Women's 60-64.

There were five Caber Toss scores of 12 during the Masters (Andrew Hobson, Mark Howe, John Jans, Bill Waddell, & Mike Zolkiewicz), and eight between 12:02 and 12:15 (Doug Berry, David Marble, Zechariah Whittington, Kevin Rogers, Chris Nickell, Stacy Green, Denise Houseman, and Moncton Athletic Director Bryan MacLean).

The 16th annual Greater Moncton Highland Games & Scottish Festival, host of the 2022 SMAI Masters World Championships, included 25 hours of live music over two and a half days, culminating in the American Rogues playing an acoustic set during a lobster dinner for athletes and their families where the region's seafood ambassador, Kilted Chef Alain Bossé, showed everyone how to dig into the crustacean on their plate. The event certainly made good on its promise to showcase feasts of strength and feasts of lobster!

The Joy of the Games

Did you know? Highland Games

Scotland's Highland Games, with the associated traditions of caber throwing and hammer tossing, are renowned throughout the world. But do you know where the world's oldest Highland Games take place, or where they toss giant champagne corks instead of the caber? Find out below in a list of Highland Games facts, courtesy of Scotland.org.

- The Highland Games held each June at Ceres in Fife, the oldest free games in Scotland, began under a Charter awarded by Robert the Bruce in recognition of the villagers' support at the Battle of Bannockburn in 1314.
- The first Highland Games in the USA took place in New York in 1836.
- The Braemar Gathering which takes place during the first weekend in September, is the only Games attended annually by the British Royal Family.
- Prosser Scottish Festivals and Games in Washington, is renowned for the "Anvil Launch" wherein a blacksmith's anvil is launched into the air with a quarter-stick of dynamite! An explosive way to mark the start and end of the Games.
- At the Bellingham Highlands Games in Ferndale, Washington, you can hunt the 'Nessie eggs', where mini watermelons are hidden around the park, the lucky hunters can swap their precious Nessie eggs for prizes. Let's hope the eggs are easier to spot than Nessie!
- Snefj,rd Highland Games in Finnmark, Norway, have hosted the most northern games in the world.
- Hororata in New Zealand, hosts one of the most southerly games in the world.
- At some Highland Games in France a giant champagne cork is tossed instead of a caber
- The Caledonian Club of San Francisco hosts one of the largest Highland Games in the Northern Hemisphere.
- The world record for the biggest bowl of porridge was set at the Cupar Highland Games in Fife in 2010. The huge breakfast of 690 litres of porridge cooked could feed 2,000 people and was more than double the existing record.

cottish events are back across the world with events across Australia, Canada, Scotland and the USA all scheduled to take place this month. Many Highland Games, Celtic festivals and gatherings have struggled with uncertainty and reduced committees during the pandemic. With several forced to cancel or adapt to local regulations. 2022 has seen many return and produce excellent events for the Scottish community to enjoy and showcase our incredible culture. The Scottish Banner urges those who can to support a Scottish event near you, these events are often run by volunteers who work many months in advance of an event to bring together a great array of Scottish entertainment and tradition.

Be sure to check the events page in this month's edition or if looking for an event several months away, or further afield, please see our website: www.scottishbanner.com/events.

Aberdeen Highland Games

In July poor weather did not dampen the grounds or spirits of those that attended the Aberdeen Highland Games in Aberdeen, NSW with crowds again being entertained throughout the day with the sounds, feats and treats of Scotland. Held every year on the first Saturday in July, the Aberdeen Highland Games is one of Australia's premier Scottish events, drawing thousands of people to the township in the Upper Hunter Valley every year to enjoy the festivities.

The Games began with a spectacular parade of bands, clan representatives and others that leads into the Massed Band Salute and Chieftain's Address that officially opens the day. The event offers fun for all the whole family, including Highland and country dancing and music, Pipe Band displays, Strong man events with the Tartan Warriors, as well as tug-of-war, egg tosses, three-legged races, and the famed Kilted Dash. A multitude of stalls offering all manner of Scottish heirlooms and souvenirs, clothing and garb, as well as a variety of food and drinks were also available. The Aberdeen Highland Games is followed by a traditional Ceilidh in the evening.

Get Your Kilt On

The Games are also a great platform for pipe bands, dancers and athletes to compete and hone their skills in Scottish tradition. Clans and Scottish societies are also often represented for those looking for information on their genealogy or how to get involved with local community groups, a great way to meet new people and share your passion for Scotland. So, get out there and 'Get Your Kilt On' and enjoy a Scottish event near you, our community is better for having them and they need all our support.

Next steps in independence referendum set out

The next steps on securing a referendum on independence have been outlined by Scotland's First Minister Nicola Sturgeon during a statement to Parliament at the end of June. She said: "Independence is about equipping ourselves to navigate the future, guided by our own values, aspirations and interests. Now is the time - at this critical moment in history - to debate and decide the future of our country. Now is the time to get Scotland on the right path - the path chosen by those who live here. Now is the time for independence. This parliament has a clear, democratic mandate to offer Scotland that choice. The UK government, regrettably however, is refusing to respect Scottish democracy. The UK and Scottish Governments should be sitting down together, responsibly agreeing a process, including a section 30 order, that allows the Scottish people to decide. That would be the democratic way to proceed.

"The issue of independence cannot be suppressed. It must be resolved democratically. And that must be through a process that is above reproach and commands confidence. That is why I am setting out today the actions the Scottish Government and the Lord Advocate will take, in the absence of a section 30 order, to secure Scotland's right to choose. I can announce, first of all, that the Scottish Government is today publishing the 'Scottish Independence Referendum Bill'. In common with the 2014 referendum - indeed, in common with the Brexit referendum and the referendum to establish this Parliament - the independence referendum proposed in the Bill will be consultative, not self-executing. The Bill states that the question on the ballot paper should be - just as it was in 2014 - 'should Scotland be an independent country'. There has been much commentary in recent days to the effect that a consultative referendum would not have the same status as the vote in 2014. That is simply wrong, factually and legally. The status of the referendum proposed in this Bill is exactly the same as the referendums of 1997, 2014 and 2016.

The Bill includes the proposed date on which the referendum should be held. I can announce that the Scottish Government is proposing that the independence referendum be held on 19 October 2023."

The British government has rejected a request to permit a second independence referendum and as we go to press is Britain's Conservative Party is in the process of electing a new leader, after the resignation of Prime Minister Boris Johnson. Opinion poll data shows that Scotland is almost evenly divided on the question of independence, with No narrowly ahead of Yes in most recent polls. The Scottish electorate rejected independence by a margin of 55% to 45% in a referendum held on 18 September 2014. The people of Scotland voted decisively to remain within the European Union in 2016, with Brexit now reenergising the campaign for independence in Scotland.

Dundee becomes Beanotown

The city centre streets of Dundee were recently transformed into a hive of activity for The Dundee Summer (Bash) Streets Festival. The event included fun packed programme that celebrates the legacy of comics in Dundee, and the stories and characters that have emerged from them. A highlight was a Hollywood-style sign which was unveiled over the city to mark the city's status as the birthplace of famous comic strip Beano. The temporary Beanotown sign stands at six meters high and 38 meters long and pays homage to the Beano comic series, which is the world's longest-running children's comic and is published by Dundee-based DC Thomson. The Beanotown sign was placed at Dundee Law, was erected to coincide with the Dundee Street Festival, which celebrates the city's comic and publishing heritage.

Dundee's streets were transformed into Beanotown, with free events across the city centre, and part of Scotland's Year of Stories 2022.

Legion Scotland granted Freedom of Dumfries and Galloway

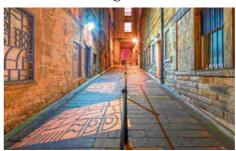

The Royal British Legion Scotland (Legion Scotland) has been granted the Freedom of Dumfries and Galloway. Councillor Archie Dryburgh, the Council's Armed Forces Champion, said: "Legion Scotland makes a vital contribution to the lives of service personnel, veterans and their families. I'm immensely proud to be the Council's Armed Forces Champion and delighted that Dumfries and Galloway Council has granted Honorary Freeman status to Legion Scotland." 2021 was the 100th anniversary of the Legion and, In September 2021, Dumfries and Galloway Council agreed to grant Honorary Freeman status to Legion Scotland. In June 1921, Field Marshall Haig founded the Royal British Legion Scotland, now known as Legion Scotland, bringing together several charities that had been established to assist those returning from the First World War and residing in Scotland. Around the same time, the Royal British Legion was formed to assist those returning and living south of the border Earl Haig established 2 poppy appeal funds. One was organised and delivered by the Royal British Legion in all areas other than Scotland. The second was delivered by the Earl Haig Fund Scotland, now known as Poppy Scotland. When service personnel return to civilian life after service with the armed forces, some need community and friendship. This can be as a result of their experiences in the services of just because they are no longer part of the 'military family'. Legion Scotland represents and supports veterans and their families and, every day, makes a difference to the lives of veterans through its comradeship and befriending programme, by developing stronger communities, and by supporting remembrance. Legion Scotland has more than 140 branches and 60 associated clubs, with more than 20,000 members. Each branch is run by a volunteer committee, dedicated to supporting the armed forces community.

Councillor Rob Davidson, Depute Leader and Civic Head of the Council, said: "As the Council's Civic Leader, I'm very pleased that our Council agreed to Grant the Freedom of Dumfries and Galloway to Legion Scotland. Along with our Freedom for the Royal Regiment of Scotland, and our Armed Forces Covenant, it demonstrates our region's support for our armed forces."

Residents and artists breathe new life into Edinburgh's historic closes

Edinburgh World Heritage has announced the completion of the first batch of its Twelve Closes Project. Edinburgh's closes, the narrow, often steep alleyways branching off from the Royal Mile, are an important characteristic of the Old Town, and a reminder of the city's medieval origins. However, Edinburgh's closes are often perceived as being unclean and unsafe, particularly at night. This innovative co-design project aims to renew and reinterpret some of Edinburgh's most historic closes, creating safer and more attractive spaces for residents, businesses and tourists to explore.

The project partnership between Edinburgh World Heritage and the City of Edinburgh Council, working with Edinburgh Napier University, has sought to tackle local problems such as anti-social behaviour through alternative forms of street lighting; brightening and enhancing the historic alleyways. This has been achieved by bringing together members of the local community and enabling participation in the design process, supporting them in selecting themes and historic stories to interpret and present. The first batch has seen the completion of new lighting, art installations and interpretation panels in Carrubber's Close, Chessel's Court and Stevenlaw's Close as well new lighting for the community-led interpretive art project in Pirrie's Close. Fiona Rankin, Edinburgh World Heritage Project Manager, commented: "It is fantastic that each of these closes have been transformed by working in partnership with local communities and we are delighted with the finished result. The co-design process has empowered communities to tell their stories, and the alternative way of lighting historic streets complements the heritage, and will encourage more people to get out and explore the Old Town."

Final engagement on design of Glasgow's George Square

A final public consultation stage has begun in Glasgow to ask what residents think about an initial sketch for George Square that has been developed following earlier engagement on what was wanted from the Square, Glasgow's foremost civic space, in terms of use and design. The engagement will inform the final design of both the Square and around 2.5 kilometres of the surrounding streets in what is the George Square Area Project, aka Block C of the Avenues programme for Glasgow city centre, funded though the Glasgow City Region City Deal. The proposal features a large lawn and an open space with seating and cafe areas under tree canopies. Existing monuments and statues would be either retained or relocated within the square.

Councillor Susan Aitken, Leader of Glasgow City Council, said: "Glasgow deserves a civic heart that reflects the great, welcoming, vibrant city that it is - and I'm pleased people from all over the city have taken their opportunity to tell us what George Square means to them and what they would like to see it become. This final engagement will not only see their thoughts on our city's most historic and loved public space take shape; but also give Glaswegians a final chance to influence the final design."

More information on the Avenues programme, the biggest of its kind in the UK, is available at: www.glasgowcitycentrestrategy. com/project/avenues.

TENEMENT TALES

By: Brian Diamond

Canadian Brian Diamond has developed a collection of short humorous stories which were written to create a book that he could give to his 13 grandchildren. The stories are 100% true and accurately portray his childhood growing up in a tenement in the industrial suburb of Springburn in Glasgow in the 1940's and 50's.

Weekend Frolics

Tell dear readers, as I start to write another chapter of Tenement Tales, recording for posterity my youthful experiences of growing up in Springburn, clearly the Northern jewel in Glasgow's crown, I am stating for the record yet again, that being the "good boy that I was", all the events reported here are strictly hearsay. I of course never participated in any of these nefarious activities, I am reporting them purely as an observer for the benefit of our readers, that's my story and I'm sticking to it.

Friday night was always a very special night to look forward to for the street urchins and wee rascals of tenement dwelling, it was pocket money night. A night when your father gave you money to buy candies, or if you saved up your pocket money you might have enough to buy a small toy. Remember there was no television or electronic games to play back then so kids had to use their imagination to generate their own amusement. If you were lucky, you had a good radio in your house, and the one in my home was a thing of beauty and a joy to behold.

Radio Luxembourg

It was a big Ferguson I believe, with a highly polished wooden case and enough large glowing valves inside to light up an atomic power plant. It was advertised in the store as "Hear Radio Luxembourg all day", when my parents bought it, fat chance of that ever happening, this was over marketing at its best.. We lived three up on Keppochhill Rd, and my father maintains that the best reception we ever got was when the tramcar passed the close he could hear the clippie asking for "fares please". Compound this with the steam train chugging uphill from Queen St Station and passing the tenement, the engine noise came straight through the radio, and it sounded like we had stereo sound long before stereo was invented.

The highlight of our radio life was to listen to the football results allowing my father to check his football coupon on a late Saturday afternoon. We were all told to hush as dad huddled over the radio with pen and coupon in hand, high in anticipation of scoring eight draws to win £75,000, a king's ransom in those days. Don't anyone dare to talk or even breathe out loud as the results were being announced, Raith Rovers 2, Kilmarnock ?? snap, crackle and pop as yet another tram or train passed our building. Dad would shout, "did anyone hear that result" and if you did, it was best not to say because then you would be talking over the next result, and that was bad medicine. "Radio Luxembourg all day be dammed" he would shout on these occasions, it was lucky that we lived three stories up, as on many a late Saturday afternoon the radio would have found the window during the Saturday Littlewood's pool ritual.

All three of us kids and our mother would be hysterical with internal laughter as our father strained to hear the results and we would have to leave the room to laugh out loud. The irony of this is that we always had the Saturday Pink Sports edition of the Evening Times delivered with the results posted, but oh no, that would be way too easy, we had to observe the Saturday PM radio ritual. I digress, all of this just came to me as a flash back to me when I mentioned the radio, so on to weekend frolics and what we did to amuse ourselves as kids.

Homemade fun

There was a lane that ran parallel, between the backyards of Gourlay St. and Keppochhill Rd. It ran from Millerbank St, crossed Crichton St, Morrin St and exited at Keppoch St, both sides of the lane were enclosed with middens, wash houses, and high walls. Now these lanes on a Friday evening were for many inebriated men, a short cut on the way home from their local pub. As kids, we used to rake the middens to find empty tin cans which we filled up with all manner of completely horrible disgusting stuff, I shudder to think what was in those cans. Having done this, we would then stack the tin cans three high right in the middle of the lane, and then lie flat on the dyke roofs waiting patiently for the next stumbling happy fool to come along.

It was quite amazing really, there seems to be a fatal attraction between drunk men, and stacked cans that completely defies logic...., apparently a drunk man cannot resist kicking stacked cans or so it appeared to us kids. So, there we were, lying flat on the midden or wash house roofs, watching in anticipation as our quarry takes aim with his foot and boots that cans down only to find himself covered in the mysteries that the middens, and bladders of the rascals provided. It was priceless to watch the antics of these men as they looked up in wonder at where did this stuff come from, and we on the roof could never laugh out loud for fear of being caught. This became a regular pastime on a Friday or Saturday evening, some of the men who had been caught before, would actually check inside the top two cans before kicking them. We of course had hidden the bobby crap in the bottom can which they never checked and often we managed to get the same man several times, it was like taking candy from a baby.

The next round of homemade fun came from sitting on top of the wash houses in the dark, and two of the braver urchins would attach a thread with a button at the end to the wooden window frame of the lower down house in the close. Once the set up was complete, the bobbin of thread was fed out, up to the rascals on the midden roof, and from there we could make the button tap on the glass window of the victim. They would of course come out to see who was tapping on the window, soon realise what was happening, and shout in the direction of the dyke a name of some local rascal, "John Smith, I'm going to tell your mother, or alternatively, John Smith, I'm gonna boot your a - - - when I next see you." Whether poor John was there or not was immaterial, he was a known rascal and a likely candidate for this mischief. At this point, all the perpetrators would slide silently of the roof and disappear into the darkness of the lane at the back.

Shenanigans

A similar piece of mischief, once again instigated from the wash house roof in the dark required a little more bravado than the window/button annoyance. This entailed the acquisition of a piece of clothesline rope and after being cut to the right size, one of the bolder kids would go upstairs to the firstfloor landing. Once there he would tie the rope securely to the door handle on the left had side of the landing and then tie it to the other door handle on the right-hand side, praying all the time that no one would come up or down the stair, or someone wanting to exit the house that was being tied up. Once the handles were secured, the culprit would bang loudly on both doors and beat a hasty retreat down the stairs to join his associates on the dyke where we could watch this through the stair head window.

The trick here was to leave enough slack in the rope so that each neighbour only had enough room to open their door about three inches, so they banged each other's doors as they were trying to open them. All these shenanigans were best observed in the dark from the safety of the midden roof where a safe escape could be made in the lane. So, against this backdrop of mischief, it was not surprising that my mother wanted me to improve my social skills and befriend a better class of company who would keep me out of trouble, little did she know, be careful what you wish for mother...

s we are now in the midst of Scotland's Year of Stories 2022, the Scottish Banner caught up with Marie Christie, Head Of Development, Events at VisitScotland – Scotland's national tourism organisation – to hear more about this Themed Year, and how it is inspiring locals and visitors to discover more of Scotland's stories.

What are the main themes of Scotland's Year of Stories 2022?

Marie Christie: Year of Stories aims to embrace the widest range of activity and content aligned to the theme, with a focus on inclusivity and diversity. In terms of experiences, events and activity, this has been developed across five cross-cutting strands:

- Iconic stories and storytellers a celebration of Scotland's wealth of treasured and iconic stories and storytellers from classics to contemporary.
- New stories shining a light on emerging, fresh and forward-looking talent.

- Scotland's people and places our people and places have inspired the widest range of stories and storytellers across the world. The year promotes how Scotland's diverse culture, languages, landscapes and ways of life provide a source for all types and forms of stories.
- Local tales and legends every community has its distinct tales to tell; stories of now as well as those passed through the generations.
- Inspired by nature our encounters with nature are an unfailing source of stories old and new. These stories define our place in the natural world and help to create a more sustainable future

What role do stories play in attracting visitors to Scotland?

Marie Christie: The love of stories is hardwired into us all; it is one of the strongest ways we connect with one another and share our experiences. Great stories, well told, can evoke indelible images in our minds and bring contemporary and traditional cultures to life.

We know that one in five people are inspired to visit Scotland, having seen the destinations on film or TV. Every community has its own tales to tell and places to highlight as inspiration for well-known books and films, as well as visitor attractions that showcase our literary and storytelling heritage. Our Year of Stories events programme is animating places and spaces all over Scotland, creating memorable moments for visitors to enjoy.

The year is shining a spotlight on our diverse stories and creative talent, literary visitor attractions, festivals and bookshops. It's also encouraging people to explore Scotland's rich tradition as a backdrop for film and TV. New stories are being created every day and we hope that visitors to Scotland that are joining us in celebrating the Year of Stories, capture and share their own #TalesOfScotland.

It's a theme with far-reaching appeal and we hope it will resonate with locals and visitors alike, encouraging them to experience all kinds of stories for themselves.

What Year of Stories events can visitors to Scotland enjoy for the remainder of 2022?

Marie Christie: There are some really exciting events taking place across the country that will bring Scotland's stories to life in creative ways. In Scotland's capital city, from 13-29 August Edinburgh International Book Festival will showcase Scotland's Stories Now with both in-person and online events. Stories take centre stage at Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh and the Regional Gardens at Benmore, Logan and Dawyck Botanic Gardens until 15 October where visitors can enjoy an enriched visit to the gardens through audio trails inspired by words and nature in Of Scotland's Soils and Soul.

In September, Findhorn Bay Festival runs from 23 September – 2 October in a dramatic Moray setting while in the south, Scotland's Book Town, Wigtown, is the setting for the annual Wigtown Book Festival on the same dates (as well as offering a dozen bookshops to explore).

Moving into autumn, the Northern Stories Festival from 7 to 16 October will be a spectacular celebration of the stories of the far north of Scotland, taking place across Caithness in celebration of Scotland's ancient Nordic connections and close ties to North America. The annual Scottish International Storytelling Festival, runs from 14 to 30 October, and this year it will include the Map of Stories - a specially curated project for Year of Stories with 'film ceilidhs' celebrating the most iconic voices - past and present - from Scotland's oral storytelling traditions. As the nights get darker visitors have the chance to immerse themselves in Scotland's history at Stirling Castle at the atmospheric Tales from the Castle storytelling events, taking place after hours on 21 and 22 October.

What do you expect the legacy of this Themed Year to be?

Marie Christie: The Themed Year has helped shine a spotlight on our wealth of storytelling attractions, locations, events and festivals across the country and we hope that it will encourage people to return for future visits. There are so many attractions across Scotland which all have great stories to tell and are well worth a visit during any year. As part of the Year of Stories, we have been shining a spotlight on new stories, which will be a legacy for the future. The regional Community Campfires events organised by Scottish Book Trust generated a wealth of local residents' stories, and the Edinburgh

International Book Festival encouraged people across Scotland to share Scotland's Stories Now by responding to the prompt 'On this Day'. The year has highlighted how discovering our rich stories enhances a visit to Scotland – whether that be through a tour guide with their storytelling skills and expert knowledge, or hearing about local tales and legends of the region you are visiting. As part of the Year of Stories, we have encouraged communities to share the stories that are special to them, and we hope that becomes something they can build on in years to come.

A main focus during the Year of Stories is the celebration of Scotland's iconic stories and storytellers, both past and present. Can you tell us about some of the attractions and experiences associated with them which visitors can enjoy?

Marie Christie: Ayr is where our great national Bard, Robert Burns, was born and it is home to the Robert Burns Birthplace Museum managed by the National Trust for Scotland. Visitors can explore the humble cottage where Burns was born and spent the first years of his life. The Museum houses more than 5,000 Burns artefacts including his handwritten manuscripts.

Abbotsford, the charming home of celebrated author Sir Walter Scott, sits on the bank of the River Tweed in the Scottish Borders town of Melrose, and stands as an enduring monument to the tastes, talents and achievements of its creator.

The Writers Museum, situated just off Edinburgh's Royal Mile, pays tribute to Burns, Scott and Robert Louis Stevenson, the Edinburgh-born author of such classics as Treasure Island and Kidnapped.

The TV series Outlander and the novels by Diana Gabaldon on which it is based have drawn worldwide attention to one of the most famous periods in Scottish history – that of the Jacobite Uprisings. As well as the real-life history locations featured in the story, visitors can explore the locations used in the show, ranging from Culloden Battlefield near Inverness and the delightful Kingdom of Fife conversation villages of Falkland and Culross to the Glasgow Cathedral, Callendar House in Falkirk, and the spectacular Drumlanrig Castle in Dumfries & Galloway.

For fans of JK Rowling's Harry Potter series, a range of tours are on offer, from walking tours of Edinburgh to discover the city locations which inspired the author, to atmospheric Glen Coe, and the iconic Glenfinnan Viaduct over which the Jacobite Stream Train runs between Fort William and Mallaig.

Many stories from around Scotland of course come from folklore stretching back for hundreds of years, often derived from our landscapes and seascapes, as well as the culture and ways of life that emerged from these locations. In our most northerly island groups of Orkney and Shetland, there are many folk tales of 'The Hill Folk', and the Norse history of these islands can be traced today in local place names. In the Outer Hebrides, tales of mermaids, selkies and other sea monsters were handed down in Gaelic through the generations.

Those exploring their Scottish ancestry can gain an insight into the story of how their ancestors lived and the tales they would have grown up with by visiting local history museums, or those which focus on lifestyles in years gone by. These include Auchindrain Historic Township near Inveraray, Argyll and the Highland Folk Museum in Newtonmore at the heart of the Cairngorms National Park, both of which give an insight into Highland farming life, and touch on the story of the Highland Clearances which caused so many Highlanders to leave Scotland, seeking a new life elsewhere.

Magical Harry Potter locations in Scotland

reat yourself to wonderful Harry Potter experiences in Scotland by visiting spellbinding film locations and immersing yourself in the wizarding world. From the famous 'Harry Potter Bridge' to the site of Dumbledore's grave, Scotland is home to lots of locations from the Harry Potter films. Here's a little help in planning the perfect trip for keeneyed Potter-spotters!

Glenfinnan Viaduct, aka 'The Harry Potter Bridge'

With its iconic arches and stunning Highland surroundings, the Glenfinnan Viaduct carried the Hogwarts Express to the world's most famous wizarding school. It features in three of the Harry Potter films, including the dramatic scene in Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets where Harry and Ron land their flying Ford Anglia onto the tracks. If you time your visit right, you might see the Hogwarts Express train (in real life the Jacobite steam train) cross the bridge 30–40 minutes after it has left Fort William, leaving a trail of steam in its wake. You can also enjoy a walk down to Glenfinnan Monument on the shores of Loch Shiel; or a wander around the fascinating visitor centre, which tells the story of the Jacobite Rising of 1745.

Discover other film locations

Majestic Glencoe was used for various outdoor scenes in The Goblet of Fire, The Order of the Phoenix and The Half-Blood Prince. The Clachaig Gully, just above the Clachaig Inn, became the location for Hagrid's Hut in The Prisoner of Azkaban.

The hut was removed after filming, but the astonishing scenery remains. Thankfully sightings of Hagrid's three-headed dog Fluffy are rare. There are plenty of other Harry Potter locations across Scotland to explore while you're on your way to Trust places. Rannoch Moor, just a short drive along the A82 from Glencoe, was where the Death Eaters boarded the Hogwarts Express in Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part I.

Steall Falls, a little way north of Glencoe, is where Harry battled the Hungarian Horntail dragon in the Triwizard Tournament in The Goblet of Fire. The island of Eilean na Moine in Loch Eilt, just past Glenfinnan Monument, was used as Dumbledore's grave, before being digitally placed in a different location: Loch Arkaig. Loch Etive, to the south of Glencoe, was the setting for the camping trip in Deathly Hallows: Part I, and also where Harry and the gang are dropped by a dragon after fleeing from Gringotts Bank.

Edinburgh home of Harry Potter

As the place where the story of the boy wizard was first put to paper, and the home of his creator, Edinburgh is a Harry Potter hotspot and one of Scotland's best places for magical experiences. Harry Potter's creator, J K Rowling, spent time conjuring up some of her famous stories at The Elephant House, a café close to Edinburgh's Royal Mile and just a 5-minute walk from Gladstone's Land. From the upstairs windows you can look down into Greyfriars Kirkyard, where you may spot some familiar names carved into the tombstones, including Thomas Riddell and William McGonagall.

Want to make your time in Edinburgh truly magical? You can choose from a variety of immersive Potter-themed tours of the city or test your wizarding skills at a Potter-themed escape room such as The Department of Magic. And find somewhere to stay among the crooked cobbled streets in the city's atmospheric Old Town - like the very own Gladstone's Land flats or a Potter-themed holiday apartment. Edinburgh is also home to several shops selling every kind of gift, trinket and prop that Potter-lovers could want, from replica wands to sorting hats! For extra Potter points, visit the shops on the colourful, sloping Victoria Street, which some say was the inspiration for Diagon Alley.

IN THE SCOTTISH KITCHEN

Chilled tomato pipers bisque

Ingredients:

1 slice white country bread, crusts removed and broken into large crumbs 2 tsp sherry vinegar ½ garlic clove, peeled and finely chopped 1 tsp caster sugar ½ red chili, seeded and finely diced 30ml/1fl oz. extra virgin olive oil 225g/8oz plum tomatoes, peeled and seeded 2 tsp tomato ketchup 200ml/7fl oz. tomato juice 2 spring onions, finely sliced ½ red pepper, roasted or grilled, peeled, seeded and diced

1/4 large cucumber, peeled, seeded and roughly diced 2 tsp pesto salt and freshly ground black pepper frozen olive oil cubes (place olive oil in ice cube moulds and freeze)

Method:

Place the bread in a food processor or blender. With the machine running add the vinegar, garlic, sugar and chili, and blend until smooth.

Add the extra virgin olive oil until the bread will absorb no more then, a little at a time, add the tomatoes, tomato ketchup, tomato juice, spring onions, red pepper, cucumber and pesto. Continue to blend to form a smooth emulsion. Season to taste with salt and black pepper. Serve with frozen olive oil cubes.

Snare drummers lobster baked potato

Ingredients:

1 red rooster potato 1 tbsp olive oil 200ml/7fl oz single cream 1 heaped tspn Dijon mustard 1 lemon, zest and juice of half 2 free-range yolks 35g/11/40z grated parmesan 2 tbsp chopped fresh basil salt and freshly ground black pepper 1 x 500g/1lb 2oz lobster,

meat removed, diced

For the salad:

1 cucumber, peeled, seeds removed, diced 2 tbsp chopped fresh flatleaf parsley 200g/7oz cherry tomatoes, quartered 1 red onion, finely sliced 3 tbsp extra virgin olive oil 1 lemon, juice only

Method:

Preheat the oven to 200C/400F/Gas 6. Bake the potato for 1-11/4 hours or until tender. Remove from the oven and set aside to cool slightly. Cut the potato in half and scoop out the flesh.

Heat the cream, Dijon mustard, lemon zest and lemon juice together in a pan until boiling.

Whisk in the egg yolks until well combined, then stir in half the parmesan and all of the basil. Season, to taste, with salt, sugar and freshly ground black pepper and continue to cook until the sauce thickens. Stir in the lobster meat.

Increase the oven to 225C/450F/Gas 8. Spoon the lobster mixture into the potato shells, sprinkle over the remaining parmesan and bake for 3-4 minutes.

Meanwhile for the salad, mix all of the ingredients together in a bowl until well combined. Serve a spoonful of salad alongside the potato.

Flying Scotsman

Ingredients:

5 fresh chicken fillets

1 haggis

1 tbsp. whisky 100ml/3.5fl oz. double cream

100ml/3.5fl oz. of chicken stock

2 tsp. corn flour

2 tbsp. whisky

Knob of butter

Method:

Preheat oven to 180°c/350F/Gas 4. Clean and flatten the chicken. Place the haggis in a bowl, pour the whisky over and leave to marinate for a few minutes.

Make a patty of haggis per portion and wrap with chicken and bacon.

Drizzle with olive oil / butter, then place on a baking tray and cook at 180°C/350F/Gas 4 for 40 mins.

Whilst the haggis is cooking, make the sauce. Add the corn flour to the stock and slowly bring to the boil until it thickens. Add whisky and simmer for 5 minutes.

Slowly add cream over a low heat. Serve with the whisky sauce in a jug, with neeps and tatties.

Bass Drum Shortbread

Craigievar Castle closure – autumn 2022 to spring 2024

By: Murray Hope

he iconic slender skyward form and distinctive pink tones of Craigievar Castle will be covered up this September until spring 2024 as the National Trust for Scotland (NTS) undertake a major conservation project. However, there is plenty of time still to explore the castle this summer before the scaffolding goes up and our collections are carefully 'put to bed'. With impressive collections of art, armour and weaponry in a unique setting, Craigievar makes a wonderful day out.

William Forbes purchased Craigievar in 1610 and extensively remodelled it in the Renaissance style. In 1824, Sir John Forbes instructed architect John Smith to make a report on the building. Smith recommended a change from the existing off-white harling to a pale pink, in order to match the colour of the Aberdeenshire granite mouldings.

Harling

Harling is the traditional Scottish protective layer applied to buildings. It is made up from a mix of lime, aggregate and water, and is applied by hand. The conservation works will reinvigorate the pink tones of Craigievar's walls with multiple coats of a 'special recipe' of limewash. NTS will also repair some of the high-level areas of harling. In addition, maintenance to interior plasterwork, conservation of the barmkin wall and further repair projects will be carried out during the closure of the castle.

Annie Robertson, Chartered Surveyor at the National Trust for Scotland, said: "The shape of Craigievar, being an L-Plan tower house, means that getting safe access to the roof-top areas is challenging. The free-standing scaffold (it will not be fixed to the building, thus preventing damage to the stonework) will take 3 months to erect but it will allow expert teams to maintain the harling and carry out discreet adaptions to details, to better protect the vulnerable edges of the harling. This will help to future-proof the building against the effects of climate change."

The target date for completing these critical repairs and re-opening the castle is spring 2024. NTS will regularly update on the progress of the project as well as offer behind-the-scenes insights into the painstaking conservation work. Look out for special hard hat tours during the works, too! #### Aberdeen post-war multi-storey flats listed at Category A istoric Environment Scotland (HES) has awarded eight multistorey flats in Aberdeen category A listing status because of their outstanding architectural and historic interest. Following consultation with residents, local stakeholders and members of the public, HES has listed Gilcomstoun Land, Porthill Court, Seamount Court, Virginia Court, Marischal Court, Thistle Court, Hutcheon Court, and Greig Court in the city centre, at Category A, meaning they are of outstanding importance.

These eight towering examples of post war architecture, which have dominated the skyline of the granite city for 60 years, help tell the story of post-war Scotland. Aberdeen was earmarked by the UK government for significant economic growth and the city then embarked on an ambitious programme of civic regeneration.

The flats are some of the finest examples of social housing in Scotland, and were designed by the Aberdeen City Architects Department, under the supervision of George McIntosh Keith, Chief Architect for the city of Aberdeen. Most buildings of this type were factory-made system-built schemes and Aberdeen unusually took a different approach which involved innovative town planning and high-quality individual designs by their own architects.

Part of what makes the Aberdeen flats so important is the number of them. All eight multis were planned as part of the original scheme and all eight survive, making their value and interest as a group unique in Scotland, which has been reflected in the listing.

Elizabeth McCrone, Head of Designations at HES, said: "Listing is a way of recognising buildings and structures that create Scotland's distinctive character, and through which we can discover more about the stories of our past. The Aberdeen flats tell us much about how the city and its architects responded to the challenges of housing large amounts of people in the city centre during the 1960s - a time of relative prosperity, low unemployment and optimism for the future. Exceptional architecture has always been built in Scotland and the Aberdeen flats should be celebrated as a key part of our 20th century heritage, which help us understand the ambitions and aspirations of the city at that time."

The proposal to list the buildings came from Miles Glendinning, a professor of modern architecture who was contacted by residents. Professor Glendinning said: "I'm a great admirer of the Granite City, and these buildings fit into its fabric, both in material (using granite in their construction) and in how they've been built into the historic and modern urban pattern. In architectural terms, these buildings stand out because architecturally and socially, they are a continuation of the civic-mindedness and pride of previous generations of great Aberdonians. They are also a social success, which for me is just as important as the architectural interest."

- The first Edinburgh Tattoo took place in 1950 and a performance had never been cancelled until the recent Covid pandemic. The Tattoo returns this month 5-27 August after a two-year pause.
- The word 'Tattoo' comes from the Dutch phrase 'doe den tap toe' meaning 'turn off the taps'. The phrase was a call used at closing time in 17th century bars. The stationed British army adopted the practice and it became a signal, played by a regiment's drum corps each night, that tavern owners should stop serving sweet ales so that the soldiers would return to barracks.
- 'Royal' was added to the Tattoo's title in 2010 by HM Queen Elizabeth to celebrate six decades of history.

- The show takes place at Edinburgh Castle's Esplanade and concludes with a march down the Royal Mile.
- The Tattoo is set up and run for charitable purposes. Over the years the Tattoo has raised millions of pounds for both service and civilian causes.
- Around 35 miles of cabling, the distance from Glasgow to Edinburgh, is required to power the Tattoo each year.
- It is custom that the famous anthem by Robert Burns, Auld Lang Syne, is sung at the end of each performance of the Tattoo.
- Each year around 200,000 people watch the live performances at Edinburgh Castle, with a further million people watching the event on television around the world.

Scotland's link to the Panama Canal

Paisley Museum has unearthed the incredible story of a Scottish dredger which built the last part of the Panama Canal and its Master from the Clyde. The Corozal was the only non-American machinery which worked on the canal more than 100 years ago, as Nick Drainey explains.

he forgotten story of a Scottish dredger and its master who sailed to the Pacific Ocean in the face of diplomatic unrest more than century ago and completed the final, difficult section of the Panama Canal has been unearthed during a multi-million revamp of one of Scotland's oldest museums. In 1912 James Bartholomew Wallace sailed the Corozal from Simons shipyard in Renfrew, around the treacherous Cape Horn to the west side of Panama. Once there, it shifted more than 4 million cubic metres of earth from the Culebra Cut, the 12km channel on the final section of the canal as it meets the Pacific.

The Clyde

In the 17th century the River Clyde at Glasgow was a shallow body of water which could be waded across at low tide. Ocean-going ships had to load and unload at Greenock with sailing up to the city an impossibility.

By the 18th century the trade in tobacco and sugar was booming and merchants wanted to be able to get their wares into the heart of Glasgow. A huge engineering project began which would see more than 100,000 tonnes of sediment dredged out. In the 19th century steam power created a revolution in production and shipbuilding on the Clyde took off, eventually seeing an estimated 25,000 vessels built on the banks of the river.

The shipyards played a vital role during the two world wars of the 20th century but decline began in the 1960s until today when they are all but gone. Nevertheless, the industrial heritage is still a source of great pride in all the communities along the Clyde, and it echoes around the world.

Despite fierce disapproval from San Francisco shipbuilders who wanted only US machinery used, President William Taft had awarded the contract for the work to the Scottish Corozal because he saw it as better value for money (just under US$400,000 compared to US$874,000). The story of how James Wallace overcame arduous seas, a tough working environment and opposition is to be told when Paisley Museum, Scotland's first municipal museum dating back to 1871, re-opens next year after a £42million revamp. In preparing for the major refurbishment the museum discovered a model of the Corozal and decided to do some investigating.

Shipbuilding family

Born into a Clyde shipbuilding family in 1870 in Renfrew, Wallace left school at 14 and began a five-year apprenticeship at Simons, a move that would eventually take him across the world. His first major voyage, in 1891, took him to the Pacific Coast of Mexico, via the Atlantic and Cape Horn. If that sounds a long way from home, it was but for many of that generation it was a chance to escape the confines of the yards. Wallace's great grandson, Andy Wallace, who has made a long-term donation of family correspondence and photographs to Paisley Museum says: "He was from a shipbuilding family - he would have been an excited young man. That was their ticket to see the world and make some money."

See the world he did, taking dredgers to Russia, China, India, Malaysia and Aden. Andy Wallace adds: "It does seem from his letters that every time he lands home he is off again."

But Andy Wallace says his ancestor's strong Christian faith was always central to his life, coupled with a "get up and go spirit". And he did find time to marry Margaret Reid Phillips in Renfrew, Renfrewshire, on 24 December 1897 when he was 27 years old, and the couple had five children.

Held in high esteem

Meanwhile, 18,000 workers were toiling on the Panama Canal, hundreds perishing in the harsh conditions. William Taft had used his presidential powers to overturn a ruling by Congress that all future machinery should be USbuilt and had awarded Simons a contract to supply the Corozal. It was one of the largest dredgers ever seen at 261 feet in length and weighing 1684 tons. With James Wallace as Master, it set sail at the end of 1911, arriving in March the following year after travelling 12,000 miles during 117 days at sea. It was an impressive sight, dwarfing the other dredgers struggling to finish the final part - the Culebra Cut. By 1913 the canal was finished with the Corozal being the first vessel to pass through the final section before it was officially opened in 1914.

John Pressley, Science Curator at Paisley Museum says Wallace "must have been held in reasonably high esteem", who says his name was included in a roll call of the senior workers on the canal. Pressley said: "He would have taken the dredger over there and spend three or six months handing it over to whoever was going to be operating it."

The Corozal went to work out of Philadelphia and was eventually scrapped in 1956. James Wallace had returned to Scotland but then went back to Panama, where he died in 1915, aged just 44. Andy Wallace says the details are sketchy and he has never found a death certificate although he does know he is buried in the country. Wallace's son became a marine engineer and his grandson, Andy's father, was a diplomat. Andy Wallace is currently retraining as a marine biologist. He sees his great grandfather's legacy as one of a "family who goes around the world doing what needs to be done"

Paisley Museum

Paisley Museum was the first municipal museum built in Scotland, designed by renowned Glasgow architect Sir John Honeyman and gifted to the town by Sir Peter Coats of the Coats family, whose Paisley-based thread-making empire stretched around the world. Paisley was thriving at the turn of the 19th century thanks to the textiles industry and there was a real climate for self-improvement and intellectual curiosity growing in the town. Countless clubs and societies had sprung up, and there was a thirst for knowledge amongst the population. One such club was the Paisley Philosophical Institution which promoted education through its public lectures on a wide range of topics. They also collected scientific apparatus, objects, artefacts and books, and by 1864 were in need of a permanent home for their collection. In 1864 they decided to launch a campaign to raise the funds needed to build a free public library and museum, and by 1867 had confirmation from Sir Peter Coats that he would pay for its construction. Paisley Museum was opened to the public in April 1871

The first curator, Morris Young, was an entomologist specialising in the study of beetles - his collection of over 2,000 beetle specimens is still held by the museum. Within 10 years of the Museum opening, plans to expand the galleries and build an Observatory were already underway. And, in 1883 what is now Scotland's oldest Observatory was opened. Today, Paisley Museum is undergoing further redevelopment to improve the display of a vast range of artefacts including world-famous textiles, ceramics, over 800 paintings, sculpture, and local archives.

Within 60 minutes from Edinburgh

f you're coming to Scotland's capital, Edinburgh, to enjoy one of its many festivals this month, you'll soon see why it's a UNESCO World Heritage Site, as well as one of Britain's greatest foodie and nightlife hotspots. And with gorgeous beaches, romantic castles and the vibrant buzz of Glasgow all only an hour away, you'll be able to experience the country's diverse landscapes, history and culture too, all within easy reach of a day trip.

The Borders

Picturesque coastlines in the east and rugged hills and moorlands in the west greet you at the Scottish Borders (bordering northern England), all of which is easily reached thanks to the Borders Railway, which connects Edinburgh and the Borders town of Tweedbank in less than an hour. Have your camera at the ready on this lovely rail journey as you pass by iconic architectural gems such as the Lothian bridge and Redbridge viaducts. Alight at Tweedbank to visit Abbotsford House, the home of famed writer Sir Walter Scott. This romantic mansion was built during the early decades of the 19th century and very much reflects the tastes of one of this era's most prominent authors. Close by is the attractive town of Melrose, which is not only the home of the magnificent 12th century Melrose Abbey, but also to two National Trust for Scotland gardens. Priorwood Garden houses Scotland's only dedicated dried flower garden and Harmony Gardens features a beautiful walled garden with breath-taking views over the abbey and the nearby Eildon Hills.

Glasgow

Did you know that Edinburgh, the capital, and Scotland's largest city, Glasgow, are only an hour apart? A lively, creative city, Glasgow is renowned for its mighty industrial heritage and world-class shopping as well as its vibrant arts, culture and music scene; it's even a designated UNESCO City of Music!

Discover why it won this status on a Glasgow Music City Tour, while fans of street art should check out Glasgow's first dedicated tour to the genre, the City Centre Mural Trail. Football lovers can take tours of the world-famous Rangers and Celtic Football Clubs, while you can discover the city's artistic and industrial legacy at a host of inspirational museums such as the Kelvingrove Art Gallery & Museum, the Hunterian Museum and Art Gallery at the University of Glasgow and the Riverside Museum of Transport and the Tall Ship on the banks of the River Clyde.

North Berwick

In just half an hour by train you can swap Edinburgh's cityscapes for coastal relaxation. North Berwick and its stretches of golden sands are spectacular - and if it's glorious views you've come for, you won't be disappointed. Sweeping vistas look out to Bass Rock, home to the world's largest northern gannet colony, and to the Forth Islands. Take a boat trip out to the islands for an even closer inspection, while bird lovers should also pay a visit to the town's Scottish Seabird Centre. Alternatively, if you fancy a game of golf overlooking these wonderful coastal scenes, tee off at either of the town's excellent links courses, the Glen Golf Club and the North Berwick Golf Club.

The town itself is home to a fine collection of cafés, bars and shops, from vintage-style tearooms to stylish coffee shops...also make sure you hit the fish and chip shops and ice-cream parlours, it's tradition at a British seaside resort! For heritage seekers, don't miss the 14th century fortress Tantallon Castle and Dirleton Castle, which houses some of the oldest castle architecture in Scotland.

Stirling

If you've ever watched the film Braveheart, you'll want to visit Stirling. The iconic National Wallace Monument, which overlooks the scene of Scotland's victory at the Battle of Stirling Bridge, gives a fascinating insight into the world of Scottish hero William Wallace. History pulsates through every inch of Stirling; explore the streets of the medieval old town, encounter intriguing royal history at Stirling Castle, and even see the world's oldest football at the Smith Art Gallery and Museum. Perhaps one of the most absorbing attractions that tells the stories of the area's past is the Battle of Bannockburn Experience.

This 3D, immersive exhibition takes you into the heart of one of Scotland's most historic battles, ending with a visit to the Battle Room where visitors can take part in the interactive battle game. And, if you're a fan of the hit TV show Outlander, take the time to visit Doune Castle. Located around 15 minutes out of town, multiple scenes from the popular series were filmed at this splendid castle, as they were for Game of Thrones and Monty Python and the Holy Grail.

Peebles

South of Edinburgh, on the banks of the River Tweed, lies Peebles, a small, attractive town with a distinctly artistic vibe, that's framed by gorgeous countryside scenery. Scottish novelist John Buchan, author of The Thirty Nine Steps, made his home here and a picturesque 13-mile walking route is named after him, the John Buchan Way. Alternatively, head out hiking in Glentress Forest, which is also brilliant for mountain biking, as its trails are one of Scotland 7stanes (seven mountain biking centres in southern Scotland). Despite its size, Peebles boasts a number of art galleries and studios and its historic past is prevalent on every corner; ancient relics are dotted across town, from the ruined Cross Kirk to an old Mercat Cross (which depicts a town's right, granted by a monarch or baron, to hold a regular market).

Don't forget

Rosslyn Chapel - Discover intricate carvings and unique stonework at one of the most intriguing places of worship in Scotland, in the village of Roslin, 30-minutes' drive from Edinburgh. Discover its story from its founding in the 15th century to its depiction in the novel and subsequent film The Da Vinci Code.

Musselburgh - Step into the past at this historic market town that derives its name from the mussel beds found on nearby shores. It's also home to the oldest racecourse in Scotland – which hosts many race meets throughout the year – as well as to the historic ninehole Musselburgh Links golf course, which has royal connections going back to the early 16th century.

Linlithgow Palace - Explore royal history at the birthplace of Mary Queen of Scots, a palace that was once a stopping point for royalty enroute between Edinburgh Castle and Stirling Castle. Visit in the summer to enjoy its annual jousting spectacle.

Square Mile of Magic

ext and images by: David McVe

Then someone from Glasgow tells you something good about Edinburgh, it must be really good. And there's no denying that the hills of Edinburgh are very special. Popular tradition gives Edinburgh, like Rome, seven hills;

- Castle Rock,
- Calton Hill,
- Arthur's Seat,
- Corstorphine Hill,
- Blackford Hill,
- The Braid Hills,
- Craiglockhart Hill.

Summits

Some of the hills are now mostly urban:
Castle Rock has the world-famous castle on top, and while Calton Hill has plenty of open space, it's also home to several tourist attractions, including the unfinished National Monument. Its summit has a breath-taking view along Princes Street towards the castle, a glorious cityscape
- although Glaswegians like me will tell you the University of Glasgow seen from Kelvingrove Park is even better.

The celebrated Arthur's Seat is actually one of several peaks within the miniature range of hills that is Holyrood Park. It's a glorious place, about a mile square with its own summits, lochs, glens, crags, ridges and small burns. Arthurs Seat (251m/822ft) is always busy but other parts of the park are less so. Salisbury Crags is the rampart of cliffs that guards Arthur's Seat from the city centre. A walk along the edge of the crags - keeping an eye on any children in the party - on well-beaten paths is a marvellous experience. The highest point of the crags (174m/570ft) is a summit in itself and is always less busy than Arthur's Seat.

Other summits in Holyrood Park include Whinny Hill (177m/583ft) and the two peaks nearest to Arthur's Seat, the bouldery Crow Hill (238m/780ft) and Nether Hill (237m/779ft). Keen walkers could spend an enjoyable half-day bagging the tops, and everywhere there are echoes of history. If you enjoyed your visit to Arthur's Seat, so did Burns, Scott and Stevenson. James Hogg set a terrifying episode of The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner on the summit.

A name and a history

Every bump and hollow and corner in these hills has a name and a history: what about the Galloping Glen, the Gutted Haddie, Hunter's Bog and Haggis Knowe? Hunter's Bog is the glen enclosed by Arthur's Seat and the Salisbury Crags. On the orders of Mary Queen of Scots, it was once dammed to create a small loch. Later it was drained but is now becoming boggier again and there is often open water there; I've seen a heron fishing in the shallows.

There are many ways to the summit of Arthur's Seat: a favourite of mine is by the Lang Rig, an airy ridge thought to be the remains of a lava flow. From Hawse, the pass between Arthur's Seat and the Salisbury Crags, you can take a lungbursting zig-zag path up the hollow known as the Gutted Haddie. You emerge on a plateau just below the hill's rocky crown. A longer route from Hawse follows the Piper's Walk, which runs through some of the woodland above Hunter's Bog and deposits you at the top of the Lang Rig route to the summit. The slopes between Hunter's Bog and the Piper's Walk are surprisingly wooded, adding to the park's Watch as you move around the summit of Arthur's Seat; the rock outcrops are shiny and slippery with the passage of many feet. It isn't a place for quiet contemplation as thousands reach the top on a good day. But then, Holyrood Park has a long history of human occupation. There's evidence that people lived in the park area as long ago as 8000 BC. Some features traceable on the ground, including four hill forts, probably date back as far as the Iron Age.

Nothing can take away the magic of Holyrood Park's magnificent square mile.

A great bite has been taken out of the Salisbury Crags at their south-eastern end by quarrying. It was in this quarried section that the pioneering geologist James Hutton found evidence that enabled him to demonstrate the volcanic origin of the rock, preparing him for his seminal work Theory of the Earth which appeared between 1785 and 1799. Part of the quarried area is still known as Hutton's Section.

Magnificent square mile

Nowadays the park is managed by Historic Scotland and is an island of nature in the city, yet it's amazing that any creatures live here given the sheer mass of humanity that sometimes crowds in. During the 1745 Jacobite Rising, Charles Edward Stuart's army camped in the park and exercised in Hunter's Bog. Exactly 200 years ago, the visit of George IV to Edinburgh was commemorated by cannon fire from Salisbury Crags and a bonfire and musketry on Arthur's Seat. An estimated 200,000 people crowded onto the high ground to watch Queen Victoria review volunteer troops in the park in 1860.

The track that runs along the foot of the Salisbury Crags is known as the Radical Road. It was built by unemployed weavers under a pioneering welfare-to-work scheme in 1820, and its name comes from the weavers' reputation for being in the vanguard of campaigns for social and political justice. Sadly, it is currently closed and fenced off owing to recent rockfalls. This is a shame as it's a fine walk in itself; I understand that Historic Scotland need to care for visitors but surely crags are always going to be prone to this?

Holyrood Park's peaks, like all of Edinburgh's hills, are eastern outliers of the Pentlands which start tumbling to sea level on the outskirts of Edinburgh. If you take Edinburgh's No. 4 bus to its terminus (the appropriately named Hillend) you'll find yourself at the home of Edinburgh's own ski resort, the Midlothian Snowsports Centre. From these slopes, the hills of Edinburgh, even Arthur's Seat, begin to look a little modest.

But nothing can take away the magic of Holyrood Park's magnificent square mile.
